Va. Team Tops In Stockman's Contest

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — More than 45 FFA and 4-H teams competed in the Keystone Stockman's Contest as part of the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) on Monday here at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex.

The top team was Central FFA Chapter Team Number 1 from Virginia. Central FFA Team Number 1 was the division winners for the meats division and total identification. The management division winner was Steuben County 4-H from New York State. The Livestock division winner was the Tipton 4-H team.

In competition, young people test their beef, sheep, and swine industry knowledge. The contestants participate in tests on their judging skills, meats identification, and livestock management. Team awards were presented on the basis of high scores on the tests.

In the individual competition, top five scoring individuals are interviewed by a panel of three judges, where each contestant is judged on his or her knowledge of the livestock industry and individual

Preservationists Celebrate 51,000 Acres

DAVID GRIFFITH
Special To Lancaster Farming

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Several hundred of those involved in farm preservation efforts that recently put Lancaster County at the top of a nationwide list got together here Tuesday evening to celebrate the achievement.

Gathered at the Landis Valley Museum, preservationists joined local and state leaders and others to talk about how it happened and how to keep the movement going.

"Every generation that rises up needs the land," Lancaster County Commissioner Paul Thibault told the crowd. " 'The good Lord makes us all stewards of the land. We've come a long way in a relatively short period of time. Our challenge is to preserve a resource that forms the root of who and what we are."

Lancaster County has now preserved more than 51,000 acres through the combined efforts of the county's Agricultural

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Taylor Cox has traveled far from his roots in the Kansas heartland to Lancaster County's "Garden Spot" to become the Officer in Charge (OIC) of the USDA Market News office in New Holland.

Arriving here at the end of August with his wife and two young daughters, Cox settled in quickly to establish a home for his family and at the same time take on a new job. It helped that he was prepared in advance for both endeavors by Corbitt Wall, who formerly worked here and was his boss at the St. Joseph, Mo. USDA office.

Cox was graduated from high school in Anthony, Kan. (south of Wichita) and earned a degree in animal science at nearby Fort Hays College, where he met his wife Maggie. Taylor and an older sister grew up on a 1,000+-acre farm where cattle were grazed on the early wheat.

During high school, Cox was active in FFA, with his activities centered on horses (namely in rodeo competitions), not cattle. He participated in calf roping and team roping events. He received the Kansas State Star Farmer Award in 1995.

After college graduation, Cox worked on the other side of the fence, so to speak. He worked two years at Excel's Friona, Texas plant, where he was involved in cattle procurement to provide for a 4,200-head-per-day slaughter level. It was a pressured job that involved a six-day workweek.

At age 25, Cox has found his work experience for a packing operation was advantageous to market reporting. He was able to readily work with the USDA's new mandatory price reporting (MPR) system for packers. Technology has enabled the market reports to be quickly disseminated for all — the producers, packers and market analysts, not to mention the traders in the futures market.

Although Cox is new on the job here, he understands the importance of marketing information for the small-sized producer. He said that he uses a laptop computer, and programs have been developed to almost instantly average out weights and

CATTLE Compared to Thursday, lean slaughter cows sold weak to 50 lower, with Breakers and Boners trading fully 1 00 lower. The supply was fairly light when compared to the last test, with the bulk of the cows coming through the ring in very full condition. Lean cow bids suffered somewhat on the light buyer attendance, however, the fleshier cows seem to really take a hit on the lighter runs and attendance. Slaughter bulls sold fully steady to firm on the light run The bull supply included an increase of Bullocks, which sold with a higher undertone Slaughter cows made up 57 percent of the run

Compared to Thursday, slaughter steers sold firm to nearly 1.00 higher. Most of the increase was on Tuesdays bids, as Mondays bids were mostly steady. The increase in bids came on an increase in quality and buyer activity. Buyers were especially active in procuring the top-end high Choice and Prime fats, with the bulk of the Choice steers trading steady to firm. The supply was mixed, however, the fancy steers and the heavyweights definitely stuck out Buyers were not necessarily in dire need of the high quality steers, but knew better than to let the powerhouses featured in Tuesdays supply pass them by On the same note, buyers were somewhat reluctant in procuring the heavyweight steers; which were discounted fairly severely due to the increase in the supply of heavies. There has definitely been an increase in heavy cattle over the past couple of weeks, even though most feeders should know by now that the majority of the steers weighing above the 1500 lb range are going to be docked. Holstein steers were in very short supply, and sold with a steady undertone on the light run. The slaughter heifer supply remains very light, with the bulk of the run either over-finished or Heiferettes. Compared to Monday, lean slaughter cows sold fully steady to firm. Breakers and boners were in short supply, with demand lacking on the few on offer. A trend was not fully established on the fleshier cows, but a definite lower undertone was noted. Due to a very light run, a slaughter bull trend was not established. The supply included 27 percent steers, 6 percent heifers, 43 percent cows, 2 percent bulls, and 22 percent feeders.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1185-1465 lbs 66.00-68.50, few individuals 69.00-69 75. Choice 2-3 1125-1490 lbs 63.00-67.50, full 62.00- 62.75, heavyweights 1505-1650 lbs 56.50-63.25. CALVES: Compared to last Tuesday, veal calves sold steady to 5.00 lower. Holstein bull calves suitable for special-fed veal barns sold sharply higher in very active trading as buyers aggressively tried to fill their immediate needs. Holstein heifers also sold with a higher undertone on a lighter run. The supply included 641 in the state graded sale, with around 95 percent of the supply returned to feed.

CATTLE: Compared to Tuesday, the bulk of the Choice slaughter steers sold mostly steady to instances weaker. However, bidding was sporadic on the Prime and Select steers; with high Choice and Prime steers trading weak to instances 50 lower, and Select steers showing a little firmness. Buyers did not seem to pursue the high quality stock near as aggressively as they have over the past few weeks. On the same note, buyers were noted as paying a little more for the Select and lower Choice stock to fill loads, especially late. Holstein steer receipts were a little higher when compared to the runs over the last few weeks. Also, there was an improvement in quality; and buyers took notice as the bulk of the run sold with a firmer undertone. Slaughter heifer runs remain light, with the supply continuing to be primarily Heiferettes. Lean slaughter cows sold mostly steady on a good run of mixed quality. Lean cows ranged from thin to full in condition, with buyers paying close attention to the weigh-ups. On an increase in supply, Breaking and Boning cows sold with a definite higher undertone on good buyer interest. There has not been a good run of fleshier cows for awhile; therefore prices were not fully comparable. Higher bids could definitely be attributed to better buyer presence. Compared to Tuesday's very light run, slaughter bulls sold weak to 2.00 lower. The supply included 45 percent steers, 7 percent heifers, 35 percent cows, 4 percent bulls, and 9 percent feeders.

NEW HOLLAND, PA
October 9, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

FEEDER PIGS: WEDNESDAY 395, LAST WEEK 418, LAST YEAR 443.

Compared to last week, a feeder pig trend was not established due to low receipts over the past few weeks. However, local interest is starting to pick back up; with out of state feeders still not able to procure pigs due to the psudo-rabies outbreak of a couple weeks ago. Slaughter pigs weighing under 50 lbs sold weak to 10.00 lower, with pigs weighing over 50 lbs not fully tested. Bidding was very sporadic and only moderate at best. Buyers were definitely selective on the grades, as the higher quality hogs sold at a definite premium to the number twos. Near 17 percent of the run returned to feed. All pigs were weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weights.

New Holland Hog Auction

NEW HOLLAND, PA
October 7, 2002
Report Supplied By Auction

HOG RECEIPTS: 552 head, last Monday 442; last year 803.

Compared to last Monday, barrows and gilts sold fully 2.00-3.00 higher. Buyers were very active despite falling terminal hog prices, which reported lean hogs down 1.00-1.50 on Monday from 30.50-32.00. Also, hog futures closed with triple digit losses Monday; losing from 117 to 165 points. Even with all of this information, local hog prices continue to stay several dollars ahead of the larger markets of the Midwest; which is something both buyers and sellers are proud to hang their hats on.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

OCTOBER 14-20, 2002

COLUMBUS DAY, THANKSGIVING DAY (CANADA), OCT. 14

AMERICA'S FIRST LEXICOGRAPHER

October 16 marks the birthday, in 1758, of Noah Webster, author of the first American dictionary In 1783, his American Spelling Book appeared, which first Americanized the English spelling of such words as colour and labour by dropping the u Webster made his living as a lawyer, journalist, and schoolteacher, but we tend to remember him for the many words he folded into the Compendious Dictionary of the English Language published in 1806, and, in 1828, the American Dictionary of the English Language Webster wrote his dictionaries in longhand

Words are good, but hens lay eggs.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Look for a cold winter when the apple peels are thicker than usual.

Warm October, cold February.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Include the apple peelings when cooking apples for jelly, because that's where most of the pectin is stored.

CRAB APPLE JELLY

3 pounds crab apples, washed and cut, but not cored or peeled water, to cover
1 cup sugar for each cup of strained juice (about 4 cups)

Boil crab apples in water until soft Wet a jelly bag and strain crab apples through it (For clear jelly, do not squeeze bag) Measure the juice, then simmer in a stainless steel pot for 5 minutes Skim froth, then add sugar Simmer for about 10 minutes, until jelly thickens and drops from a spoon in sheets (about 220°F) Skim foam and pour jelly into dry but hot sterilized jars to within ½ inch of top if sealing with paraffin (use ⅛ inch of wax) or to within ¼ inch of top for two-piece metal lids Seal, cool, and store in a cool, dark, dry place

Makes about 4 cups

OPINION

Time Of The Horse

This issue we launch a brand-new section for Lancaster Farming: Boarder & Trainer.

The idea for Lancaster Farming's Boarder & Trainer came to us about two years ago, when we recognized a need for a publication for the businesses that support the horse industry. They include the hay growers and marketers, the tackmakers, the feed and horse management supply companies, and the nutritionists and veterinary services. In other words, while many horse publications go straight on into the industry, reporting only events by breed associations, we decided to look into the management and training aspects of the exhibit and competition segments of the horse industry.

This comes at a time when the Farm Show Complex has completed construction of its new Equine Center. The marvelous center measures 145 by 290 feet and has a seating capacity of 1,800. The center includes an equine barn to stable 140 horses. The barn is connected to a fabulous exhibit facility, which already has shown vast improvements.

The new hall is available for the stabling of horses in addition to serving as a staging area. The facility should be able to accommodate up to 2,000 horses when coupled with the existing Farm Show space. It is designed to be flexible enough to host state, regional, national, and international competitions.

The total renovations tower close to $90 million as of this writing. "With all this new construction combined with our current facilities, we will be dominant," said Sam Hays, state secretary of agriculture.

The horse industry remains viable, and Lancaster Farming, through Boarder & Trainer, wants to play a major role in advocating and promoting the industry in the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast.

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Know How To Recognize West Nile Encephalitis In Horses

Jay Smoker, Lancaster County West Nile virus coordinator with Penn State Extension, reported that more cases of West Nile Encephalitis have been confirmed in horses the past few weeks in Pennsylvania. Nearly half of these cases are in Lancaster County.

One reason so many cases are in Lancaster is the fact that there is a larger-than-average horse population here. Many in our community depend on horses both for farm work and driving. Also, surveillance shows the virus to have a strong presence in the area this season. The number of dead birds and mosquito samples that tested positive is an indication of the threat to the humans and horses. Most horses and humans become infected in the late summer and early fall at the peak of the mosquito season.

Horses can only become infected from the bite of an infected mosquito. The incubation period, the time between exposure to the virus and appearance of the first signs of disease, is 3 to 15 days. There is no cure for West Nile encephalitis, but the symptoms can be treated. Where symptoms are recognized early and treated, many horses appear to have a better chance of recovering. The recovery rate nationally is 50 percent. Locally the success rate appears to be higher. As horse owners learn to recognize early symptoms, they can respond before the disease severely weakens the animal.

The virus can affect the central nervous system and cause encephalitis, affecting the brain. Clinical signs may include one or more of the following: loss of appetite and depression, fever, weakness of hind limbs, paralysis of hind limbs, impaired vision, ataxia, head pressing, head tilt, aimless wandering, convulsions, inability to swallow, circling, hyper excitability, or coma. Local veterinarians report that muzzle twitching and muscle weakness and loss of coordination (ataxia) are among the first noticeable signs.

It is important not to presume that horses with clinical signs of encephalitis have West Nile encephalitis. A definitive diagnosis requires ruling out other important diseases with similar neurological signs. This can only be done by examining blood from an infected horse. Determining the actual number of horses exposed to the virus is difficult. This is because some horses exposed to the West Nile virus may not show any clinical signs or perhaps may exhibit only vague signs of the disease.

To Vaccinate Your Horses

A vaccine to prevent West Nile encephalitis in horses is available. The manufacturer reports 94 percent effectiveness one year after the vaccination. This is still under review by the FDA. The first dose is given in the muscle followed by a booster 3-6 weeks later. The manufacturer recommends that a booster be given annually, preferably one month before mosquitoes are active.

The cost of the vaccination (series of two doses) administered by a veterinarian may vary from $60 to $100, depending on the costs of the farm visits and the vaccine. The vaccine for Eastern and Western encephalitis should not be confused with the vaccine for West Nile encephalitis. None of these provides any cross protection for the other. They are different.

Initially it was thought that mainly older horses were the most susceptible to West Nile. But this year young horses, 3 and 4 year olds, were confirmed with the disease. Younger horses, however, are more likely to recover. It should be noted that mules could also get West Nile.

The owner should consider the cost of prevention and how it might compare with the cost of treating an infected horse. Treatment costs may vary from $100 to $400, not to mention the possibility of losing the horse. Sometimes multiple visits from the veterinarian are needed to treat horses infected with West Nile. This will depend on the severity of the disease.

Smoker encourages farmers to eliminate standing water around the farm. The water trough is a potential breeding habitat when not kept clean. Drainage areas around farm buildings may also pose problems. Any area of stagnant water with decaying organic matter can turn into a mosquito producer. Since mosquitoes only fly ¼ to ½ mile from where they hatch, removing items like old tires and buckets also will help reduce numbers.

Many cases of West Nile in horses appear to be near streams, swamps, or wooded areas. While it is not possible to eliminate all mosquitoes in nature, reducing the exposure is important. Keep your horse stabled during dawn and dusk hours, the time when mosquitoes are most active. Apply insect repellants that contain permethrins.

Local veterinarians report that cases are still showing up this week. The cooler weather will reduce the rate of infection as the mosquito numbers die down. But the threat is not past until there is a hard frost or good freeze. Some mosquitoes will move toward barns, storm drains, even animal burrows to over-winter. Others will lay eggs that remain dormant until spring warmth and rains come again.

An information sheet for West Nile Encephalitis in Horses is available from your local extension office or online at www.pested.psu.edu/spWestNile.html.

Editor:

It might appear from some recent media coverage that reducing homeschool regulations in Pennsylvania may not be a good idea. Before we can draw such a conclusion, however, we must first consider the facts as well as the advantages and disadvantages.

Homeschooling may or may not be for everyone, but for those parents who have made the decision to take on the responsibility of educating their own children, most have personal motives or convictions, which they believe is the best interest of their own children.

What is important right now is the proposed state legislation (HB2560 pending in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives), a bill that will reduce paperwork and time for homeschooling parents ... a bill that will reduce time and paperwork for school districts and in turn, your tax dollars.

Is this really a good idea?

The facts are clear and cannot be denied.

Fact: in states where home education is highly regulated (such as Pennsylvania, Utah and Arizona) when compared with those states which are not (such as Texas, New Jersey and Illinois), the average test scores for home-educated students are, in all states, consistently higher than traditionally schooled students. Still further evidence shows a high rate of acceptance of home-

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WELL-MEANING CHRISTIANS

Background Scripture:
Jeremiah 22.
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians 5:8-17.

It is hard for us to imagine why the people of Judah did not respond affirmatively to Jeremiah's prophecies. His message seems so clear-cut: your ways are contrary to the will of God and you must either repent and change your ways or suffer dire consequences. So, why did they reject both him and his prophecies?

They couldn't conceive that God was all that displeased with them and their society. They were prosperous — surely that was a sign of their respectability? They were attendant to the rituals of their religion, observed the holy days, and made the requisite sacrifices. So why should they believe that God was greatly displeased with them?

They found it just as hard to believe God's judgment on them as you and I would find it hard to believe that God's judgment is falling upon us and society. We are prosperous, live respectable lives, belong to and support churches, and identify ourselves as Christians. Of what could God possibly disapprove?

Great Houses

Jeremiah spells it out for them and us: "Woe to him who builds his house by unrighteousness, and his upper rooms by injustice, who makes his neighbor serve him for nothing and does not give him his wages" (22:13). He has nothing to say about their public piety or their respectability, but he does focus upon their prosperity, which is the result not of their worthiness, but of ruthless greed.

God's woe will fall upon all those who say, "I will build myself a great house, with spacious upper rooms, and cut out windows for it, paneling it with cedar, and painting it with vermilion" (v. 14).

Their sin is not that they build great houses, but that they do so by cheating the workers who build it. Because these workers have no prosperity and no power, they are exploited by those who have both money and power. Do we not live in such a materialistic society today? Ruthless, arrogant greed — not just a few errant executives — lies behind the Enron and similar debacles. God must wince when he hears the affluent pass this off as just unfortunate "collateral damage."

If you eat fast food, the price you pay for it will likely be subsidized by the cheap labor of those who do not earn enough to make ends meet. That is our real immigration problem today. Instead of focusing on those who enter our country illegally, we need to turn our attention to those who employ them at wages which no one else would accept.

We have an immigration problem because there are those whose product is subsidized by the cheap wages of powerless immigrants. God's judgment surely rests heavily upon us today because we have permitted material things to become our god, profit our savior, and the market our holy spirit.

A Minimal Wage

Yesterday I got into a conversation with the manager of a local shop. He lamented the "terrible state of retail business today." Most retail establishments today, he said, hire young and inexperienced people because they can pay them a minimal wage. But when they become experienced, they are "let go" because employers don't want to pay for experienced, dedicated people. That was his experience in the past, but he is happy his present employers do not operate that way. But so many do.

"It seems a pity," says Reginald Reynolds, "that people who talk blandly of the advantages of 'cheap labor' ... cannot be induced to experience, even for a single day, what it means to be a 'cheap' human being — a cheap life, in fact." As long as we regard and treat the poor and powerless as the unfortunate but expected results of collateral economic damage, Jeremiah's words will be just as applicable to us and our society.

Prof. Joerg Rieger writes, "As people of my generation in Germany have asked our parents and our grandparents about their relation to the deaths of six million Jewish people, future generations will ask us about the deaths of nearly 12 million children each year, and even well-meaning theologians will not be spared." And what about well-meaning Christians?

Start Clean Next Spring with Fall Sprays

If weather delays next springs burndown applications you could wind up with some real weed-control headaches in your Roundup Ready® soybean fields That's where a well-planned timely fall herbicide application can help

Fall applications provide early burndown of actively growing weeds plus residual weed control to help you plant into clean fields next spring – just like spring burndowns do But with a fall application your fields will dry down faster for earlier planting and insects may be fewer due to less weed vegetation Populations of soybean cyst nematode may also be reduced

Fall applications of Python WDG herbicide at 0 8 to 1 0 ounce 1 pint of 2 4-D and 1 pint of Glyphomax Plus herbicide per acre control tough weeds like purple deadnettle and henbit plus common chickweed mayweed shepherdspurse butterweed field pennycress yellow rocket wild mustards and early flushes of lambsquarters

Make your fall application when soil temperatures have dropped to 50 degrees F and are continuing to fall This will help Python WDG remain stable in the soil until it activates next spring

One more benefit that Python WDG provides is the flexibility to plant corn if market or weather conditions dictate a change Canopy XL herbicide restricts growers to soybeans

When next spring arrives you can use one 32-ounce post application of Glyphomax Plus to clean up any remaining weeds in your Roundup Ready soybeans Or you can tank-mix 0 3 ounces of FirstRate herbicide with reduced rates of Glyphomax Plus if common and giant ragweed cocklebur sunflowers or velvetleaf are a common weed problem in your fields

For more information about using Python WDG and Glyphomax Plus herbicides in a fall-applied program contact your local ag retailer

SEPTEMBER CLASS III IS NEW FALL LOW

- USDA announces a $9.92 Class III.
- Cheese prices still strong.
- August cheese and butter production strong.

What a strange week regarding market signals. One report showed high cheese prices in Chicago, but others pointed to continued weakness. Everyone at World Dairy Expo in Madison was discussing the current low milk prices. The question everyone had was: when will they get higher? It appears the market is rebounding, but only marginally.

The overwhelming data at this point is that cheese and butter production are strong, demand lackluster, and market prices weak. USDA's dairy products report indicated that for the month of August, butter production was up 17.2 percent, American cheese was up 8.2 percent, and mozzarella cheese production was up 0.7 percent. Excess milk is moving away from mozzarella vats and into American-style cheeses.

USDA announced last week that the September Class III price in all federal orders is $9.92 per CWT (the Class IV is $10.22). The Chicago futures last Friday indicated that Class III prices will rise to $10.67 per CWT in October, but then decline to $10.45 by December.

What's going on?

Well, the answer is not good. The folks I spoke with at World Dairy Expo are convinced that the recent rise in cheese prices will not be sustained. There were lots of rumors why cheese prices spiked in recent weeks, none of them suggesting that this had anything to do with market fundamentals. The pessimistic outlook for cheese would explain why the futures market expects Class III prices to fall back to lower levels in November and December.

That said, most observers point out that cheddar production in the Upper Midwest is pretty tight at the moment, and that we are in the fall period when prices are normally bid up. We'll just have to wait and see.

The market will be looking very carefully for the upcoming milk production report (to be released Oct. 17). That will possibly show production responding to low milk prices. If there is a response, look for Chicago cheese prices and hence Class III prices to be bid up. Also, two important crop reports will be released this week. You will recall that grain futures prices have moderated in recent weeks, making the cost of those weekly grain deliveries more reasonable.

Miracle II Product

STRUCTURED WATER ENERGIZERS

- Contains tubes with Miracle II Soap and Neutralizer
- Cleans and energizers your drinking water or rain water
- Used in industrial applications such as swimming pools, greenhouses, hog finishing houses, feed lots, dairies & farms
- Changes the water ions from positive to negative
- Increases the PH factor in your water

Testimonial

We had just been hearing good results abgout the Water Energizers on the conference calls and decided to put one on the rain water line because the water had been having such a bad odor this past summer We thought it s time to get the cistern cleaned out again which is always quite an ordeal and smelly and the opening to the cistern is inside the store at Glick's Natural Products

Anyway, this past Tuesday P M , Oct 1st we got a plumber to install a Water Energizer The following morning the water had no more bad odor! We could hardly believe our noses but there simply was no bad smell left and it felt silky clean Normally when using the shower bath it wasn t a good experience due to the bad smell, but on Wed morning it was quite pleasant and refreshing - what a relief

Simeon Stoltzfus Millersburg, PA

Notes

The company told us the Water Energizer is maintenance free and will last a lifetime There are no parts to replace and no power required to run the Water Energizer The water simply flows through the Water Energizer and as it makes contact with the tubes containing Miracle II Soap and Neutralizer the water changes

In a recent test in a commercial greenhouse one side of the greenhouse was set up with its normal watering system and the other side was up with a Water Energizer The crops on the side of the greenhouse with the Water Energizer were ready to harvest & ship a full eight days to two weeks sooner than the crops without the Water Energizer

It was also reported that lawns became greener and healthier after watering with Energized Water

With swimming pools it was reported that the maintenance bill was $200 a month less I believe this was due to needing less chemicals

Prices.

Residential Size $900 (fits 3/4"-1 1/4" water pipes)
Commercial/Industrial Size $1500 (fits 2 plumbing)

Heat with Corn!

Burn Shelled Corn In This Biomass Furnace

A BETTER ALTERNATIVE

The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat. The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed There's no need to load the furnace several times a day. The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal UL Approved

At New Holland, Last Year Of Showing Outstanding For Sarah

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — For Sarah Zimmerman, the contest ring has come full circle.

On Oct. 1, 1990, Sarah (Sarah Boyd, then aged 9) picked up her first reserve champion hog in her first year of showing at the New Holland Farmers' Fair.

Sadly, Sarah never won grand champion hog at New Holland. Last week, her last championship drive at New Holland, Sarah, 21, picked up medium weight champion swine.

However, Sarah rose to the top at the sheep show, picking up grand champion market lamb with "Havier," a 128-pound Suffolk crossbred wether.

This was her final sheep competition at the fair, too, beginning her 13th year of showing. Sarah, Stevens, said the lamb was named in honor of a friend and co-worker of her mom, Deb.

The lamb was from B&B in Danville, Ohio. The grand champion sold to First Union Bank, represented by Ted Bowers, for $5.25 a pound.

Sarah's dad, Kerry, noted the lamb was first considered an "ugly duckling," and that it "just wasn't fancy enough," he said. But Sarah's care and management of the lamb proved essential to garnering the champion trophy.

Sarah has exhibited champion sheep at the fair, she noted, in 1998, 1999, and 2000.

Ryan Donough, 18, exhibited reserve champion lamb with "Bourbon." The 138-pound heavyweight division winner is a homebred Suffolk crossbred wether.

Ryan, son of Ed and Larue Donough, is a graduate of Manheim Central High School. He has been showing 10 years and has placed high at the fair years before.

Ryan's reserve champion sold to $4 per pound to Blue Ball National Bank, represented by Alan Strock.

Jen Zimmerman won grand champion breeding sheep at the fair. She was exhibiting at the time of the fair at the Keystone International Livestock Expo.

Radell Peters won reserve breed sheep with "Shania Twayne," a Dorset ewe from Stavers in Palmyra. Radell, 19, son of Ray and Becky Peters, Elizabethtown, won grand champion at the fair before with the same ewe.

This is Radell's final New Holland Show. He noted he will exhibit at Manheim Farm Show.

At the sale, the 264-pound grand champion hog exhibited by Jonathan Rupert, Ephrata, sold for $3.50 per pound to Stoltzfus Meats, Intercourse, represented by Zach Stoltzfus.

The 252-pound reserve champion hog, exhibited by Rachel Brubaker, Kinzers, sold for $2.75 per pound to Blue Ball National Bank, represented by Alan Strock.

There were 31 hogs and 20 market lambs at the sale. Auctioneer was Alan Diffenbach.

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.2848-1.4034 delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.3046-1.4133 mostly 1.3144-1.3936.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9850-1.0300; Class III - spot prices - .8700-.9250.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - Not available, Out 0; last week - In 154, Out 0; last year - In 96, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 127, Out 0.

The following are the September 2002 Class and component prices under the Federal Milk Order pricing system: Class II $10.91 (down $0.16 from August), Class III $9.92 (up $0.38); and Class IV $10.22 (down $0.19). The following are product price averages used in computing Class prices: butter $0.9431, NDM $0.9096, cheese $1.1438, and dry whey $0.1755. The Class II butterfat price is $1.0169 and the Class III/IV butterfat price is $1.0099.

Milk production is not rebounding as many contacts had expected now that temperatures have cooled. In New England, some contacts feel that the low milk prices are having an impact on feeding and feed quality which is resulting in smaller increases in milk output. Fat and protein tests on incoming milk are also lagging typical levels.

In the Southeast, cooler, fall temperatures usually mean an upturn in the milk flow, but reports indicate only slight gains. Milk supplies are reported as tight in much of the region. Bottled milk sales range from steady to improved. Some improved sales have been noted in the Southeast, in particular the hurricane affected areas that are now pretty much back to normal.

Surplus milk supplies are increasing slightly in the Southeast, but manufacturing plant schedules are still limited to weekends or operations with contracts to fill. In the Middle Atlantic and Northeastern areas, surplus milk volumes are still tight and plant operations are light to moderate. The condensed skim market is unchanged. Demand is fairly brisk and prices are unchanged. However, some suppliers are looking to "bump up" prices as they anticipate higher Class II & III skim prices in coming months. Some suppliers are clearing all their solids as a liquid and not having to dry.

The fluid cream market is holding at relatively firm levels. The reported tight surplus milk supply coupled with continued low fat tests are forcing some producers to purchase a few loads to supplement their own supply. Spot prices are steady to higher and demand is fairly good. However, reports do indicate that some cream cheese makers are taking fewer spot loads. This seems to indicate that their contracted volumes are sufficient to meet current, projected production levels. Ice cream production and sales are seasonal, but with fat/cream prices still very attractive as compared to a year ago, some operations are maintaining moderate output. Sour cream and bottled cream production are steady to slightly improved. Churning activity is moderate to heavy as some producers increase output to meet anticipated fall/holiday needs.

BULLS ON THE DAIRY FARM

Are you using a herd bull on your farm? Although countless evidence shows that there are many genetic and economic advantages to using artificial insemination (AI) in dairy herds, it appears that more and more producers are choosing to use natural service on the farm. Many producers use bulls to save the labor involved with heat detection and AI, or to attempt to save cows that do not become pregnant artificially.

Natural service bulls often appear to have higher fertility than AI. This is usually because bulls are excellent heat detectors, rarely missing a cow! Often herds resort to a herd bull as a "quick fix" when the cows simply will not settle with AI, with varying levels of success.

If you are using a herd bull, here are some points to consider:

1. Safety! Dairy bulls are dangerous animals. Many dairy farmers have been seriously injured or killed by an aggressive bull. Provide secure, sturdy housing and fix the facility so you can feed and water the bull without entering the pen. Make certain children and visitors are aware of the danger of the bull. Experienced bull handlers suggest using a nose ring on your farm bull with a short chain attached — the chain makes it hard for the bull to attack with his head down without stepping on the chain. The chain also makes it easier to catch the bull if necessary. Use young (14-24 months old) bulls that may have not developed the aggressive temperament seen in mature bulls. Anecdotal evidence suggests that Jersey bulls are the most dangerous — they tend to become vicious at an earlier age. Sell a bull at the first sign of hostility toward humans. Don't take a chance on working around such a bull.

2. Disease can be a problem with herd bulls — vibriosis and trichomonosis are both spread by natural service. These diseases can cause low fertility and long days open in herd of cows, as well as abortion or chronic infection. When buying a bull, be sure it is blood tested for BVD and has been vaccinated for IBR, BVD, BRSV, PI3, and lepto. Mature bulls should also be tested for trichomonosis and vaccinate all bulls for trich and vibrio.

3. Make certain the bull is fertile with a breeding soundness exam performed by your veterinarian. It is estimated that 10-15 percent of bulls are poorly fertile. The vet will check for semen quality and sperm numbers. They will also check the bull for indications of injury and infections in the reproductive system. You may wish to use virgin bulls, which may be less likely to spread disease to the cow herd from other farms.

4. The bull to cow ratio should be roughly 25-30 open cows per bull. Young bulls may exhibit a high interest in breeding cows but lack the ability to service many cows; if using a very young bull, a ratio of 15:1 or 20:1 will ensure more success. Keeping a bull confined to a bull pen and hand mating cows observed to be in heat will allow a bull to service a larger number of cows.

5. Keep accurate records of when you see cows bred or in heat — you still need regular herd checks to determine if the bull is doing his job. Most veterinarians need to pregnancy-check cows before 110 days to accurately predict dates for dryoff. These early checks will also aid in identifying problem cows before they become a lost cause.

6. Ideally, a bull should receive a ration similar to that of the dry cows in the herd. Bulls that receive a high-energy ration (common in bulls running with milking herds in freestalls) often become overweight and lazy. The high-energy ration also leads to the development of laminitis and other foot problems.

7. Watch your bull for signs of lameness, which can drastically reduce his ability to service the cows in the herd. You should treat or sell a lame bull quickly to keep the breeding program effective.

8. Rotate young bulls through the herd often, with the idea of not getting too many heifer calves from one particular sire. If the bull's genes for milk production are poor, you don't want to end up milking 30 of his daughters!

9. Remember that hot weather may affect the bull more than the cow, causing a drop in semen quality for up to two months after the weather has cooled. Heat stress can increase the numbers of abnormal sperm and reduce sperm motility for several weeks.

10. If you have several bulls running with the herd, remember that bulls have "social orders" in which older bulls may prevent younger, more fertile bulls from servicing cows in heat, limiting success of the breeding program. Try to reduce the group sizes and to utilize all the bulls fully.

Finally, if you are considering whether to use a herd bull or keep the herd bull on your farm, remember the genetic disadvantages to using a natural service bull. A 2002 study from the USDA-AIPL compared DHIA production between daughters sired by proven bulls and daughters of natural service bulls in herds across the country. They found that AI daughters averaged about 986 pounds more milk per lactation than daughters of herd bulls.

According to Dr. Ray Nebel at Virginia Tech, natural service should not be considered to "save" a breeding program until the pregnancy rate falls below 10-15 percent. A herd's pregnancy rate can be found by multiplying the DHIA "heat detection rate" by "conception rate", (percent successful).

It is important to remember that a good AI program can be as successful as a herd bull, with a huge genetic advantage to the farm. For additional information regarding the use of herd bulls, contact your local office of Penn State Cooperative Extension.

USDA Survey Looks At Homeland Security For Agriculture Producers

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers and other agricultural producers can provide input on biosecurity issues on the farm by participating in a Web-based survey this fall.

With a grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, The Extension Disaster Education Network — a coalition of extension educators at land grant universities across the country — will survey producers to identify what types of educational programs should be offered on agricultural security. The focus will be on determining the level of threat to producers.

Jack Watson, assistant director and state program leader for Penn State Cooperative Extension, explains that the producer survey will help extension staff in every state to develop educational programs and materials for producers.

"Since September 11, the news media have done a credible job of providing information about homeland security," he said. "But often that information raises questions and debate that can be addressed only with educational programs. Experts disagree about whether or not farming and the food supply are at risk of bioterrorism. This survey gives agricultural producers an opportunity to contribute to society's discussion of those issues and to help minimize the risks we face."

To take the survey, producers can visit the EDEN Web site at http://www.agctr.lsu.edu/eden, click on "Homeland Security Surveys," and choose "Survey of Agricultural and Horticultural Producers." The survey is anonymous and takes less than 10 minutes to complete. It can be taken anywhere producers have access to the Web, including libraries and extension offices, and will be available through November 2002.

the top was 15.00 lower. Bidding was only moderate, with buyers very selective on the conditions. Constant rain showers moved in Monday morning, which caused most of the calves to look and feel pretty rough. Many buyers were not willing to pay top dollar for calves knowing it was going to be a wet and cold weekend. On a very light test, Holstein heifers sold sharply higher. 	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2359	1724
LAST WEEK	2546	1823
LAST YEAR	2285	1485

Compared to last week, slaughter steers sold firm to 1.00 higher to open the week, trading steady to weak to end the trading period. Buyers came in with their cards waving early in the week, especially on the high quality stock. This was not the attitude late in the week though, as buyers were somewhat hesitant in procuring the high Choice and Prime steers. With the decreased interest in the top quality stock came a definite increased interest in owning the Select and low Choice cattle. It is not uncommon for buyers to use lesser quality steers to bring down the average cost of their loads, however late in the week these 'cheaper' steers were bringing as much as the higher quality steers. Holstein steers sold steady to firm in fairly active bidding, especially late in the week. There was a noticeable improvement in quality late, with buyers taking notice and prices trending higher on the better finished steers. Slaughter heifers remain in short supply, with this week's offer comprised of mostly Heiferettes. Lean slaughter cows sold weak to .50 lower to begin the week, trading steady to firm to close out the week. Breaking and Boning cows sold fully 1.00 lower early, trending sharply higher late in the week. Prices seem to be hinging on buyer attendance; with prices trending higher on good attendance and visa versa. Boxed beef cutout values were weaker this week, showing beef demand lightening as grocers will start promoting white meat as we are fairly close to the holiday season. The Western direct feedyards moved around 42,000 head as of Thursday afternoon. This movement is still light, with the bulk of the Southern Plains feedyards trying to hold out for at least steady money. However, the Northern yards have already moved a portion of their dresses sales 1.00-2 00 lower at mostly 98.00; with the few live sales trending about steady at 63.00-64.00. This weeks supply included 34 percent steers, 6 percent heifers, 40 percent cows, 5 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1185-1465 lbs 65.60-68.50, few individuals 69.00-69.75. SLAUGHTER HEIFERS: Choice, few Prime 2-4 1155-1335 lbs 62.50-66.00 Select and low Choice 2-3 1150-1535 lbs 56.25-61.50. Heiferettes: Commercial to Choice 2-4 1030-1405 lbs 46.50-53.50, few 58.00-58.25.

SLAUGHTER COWS: PERCENT LEAN WEIGHT BULK LOW DRESSING Breakers 75-80 Over 1400 lbs 39.50-40.75, 38.00-40.50 40.75-46.50 late in the week Boners 80-85 Over 1200 lbs 37.75-41.00 35.75-38.25 Lean (Hi-Yield) 85-88 Over 1200 lbs 36.50-38.00 32.00-36.75 Lean 88-90 Over 1000 lbs 31.75-37.50 29.00-32.00 Lean (Light-Wt) 85-90 750-1000 lbs 27.00-32.00 24.00-28.25 SLAUGHTER BULLS: Yield grade 1 1230-1980 lbs 45.75-54.00, high dressing fancy individual 60.50. CALVES: Compared to last Tuesday, veal calves sold sharply lower to kick off the week on light demand; with prices turning around mid-week as demand picked back up on better buyer participation. Holstein bulls suitable for special-fed veal barns also sold 10.00-20.00 lower to begin the period, with prices sharply higher mid-week as buyers aggressively tried to procure their immediate demands. However, the constant rains that fell late in the week washed away this bearish attitude; with buyers reluctant to own the rough calves knowing it would be a wet and cold weekend. Holstein heifers sold with a firmer undertone on fairly light tests, the demand for heifers still seems to be there, although prices were below the 600.00 barrier all week. It was not long ago that heifers were pushing the 700.00 envelope. Large slaughter calve runs are fairly light, and a trend was not established.

SLAUGHTER CALVES Choice 365 lbs 74.00; 400-490 lbs 67.00-69.00. Good and Choice 290-300 lbs 40.00-46.00; 475 lbs 41.00.

DFA, Dairylea Ask For Drought Price Adjuster

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Because of low milk prices and increasing feed costs, Dairy Farmers of America, Inc. (DFA) and Dairylea Cooperative Inc. are calling for an emergency Federal Order hearing to consider the establishment of a Class I and II drought price adjuster under all Federal Marketing Orders. In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman, DFA proposed the establishment of a drought adjuster that would be calculated on a monthly basis using USDA feed price reports.

The DFA proposal is designed to recognize the higher cost of feed and to help alleviate some of the financial stress that has resulted. DFA provided Secretary Veneman with supporting documents to further illustrate the current state of conditions for U.S. dairy farmers.

schooled students into competitive and selective colleges, local and across the nation.

This in no way suggests that home-schooled children are any different than those who attend public school. What it does clearly show is when parents assume the responsibility of educating their own children at home, their commitment is real and with proven results, as evidenced by these facts.

State regulation — too much or too little?

Fact: state regulations for homeschooling (from minimal to any degree), have not demonstrated to improve the already accomplished good results of homeschooling in any state. This dismisses any notion (or ill-conceived opinion) that any level of state regulation for homeschooling is in the best interest of education.

On the contrary, current Pennsylvania regulations are, without question, "costly for taxpayers" and "counter-productive" for educators. Under current state law, our public school district superintendents are required to spend their time and school district resources to receive affidavits, portfolios, and daily journals for each homeschooled student. Additional "valuable time" is then spent to review this material and again contact the homeschooling parent to arrange for the return of these materials. This benefits no one!

This is costing taxpayers money, robbing valuable time from the public school officials, and robbing valuable time from homeschooling parents. Solution: let the taxpayer-funded school districts concentrate on public school education and the homeschooling parents concentrate on home education.

The time (now consumed by our state law) needs to be reclaimed and applied to education. It's quite simple — pass HB2560 and move ahead with quality education in the commonwealth.

I urge all responsible fellow Pennsylvania taxpayers to contact your Pennsylvania state representative (check the phone book for their numbers) and urge swift passage of HB2560.

For those who still feel they don't know enough to make an educated decision, consider evidence from history: James Watt, inventor of the steam engine was homeschooled. Also homeschooled was Thomas Edison, best known for his invention of the light bulb, but was awarded more than 1,000 U.S. patents in his lifetime. And yes, even Alexander Graham Bell was homeschooled by his father and later attended public school.

Whether or not home education is for everyone, it certainly had its place in history, it has proven itself today, and it is certainly a viable choice for good quality education.

WHAT IF THIS IS NORMAL?

What Exactly Is Normal

Many farmers are waiting for life to return to the "way it was" or the "way it should be." Some are starting to wonder if it will. Banking on either one seems to have considerable risk. Worst of all, many of us are not sure what exactly we want to return to.

New Challenges

If 2001 is what normal looks like for agriculture then some of the factors we had hoped were quirks could be permanent challenges for producers to contend with.

From the information explosion to the need for increased speed in all aspects of farming, John W. Phipps, award-winning columnist and sixth generation farmer, identifies some of the key areas that seem to make the difference between surviving and thriving.

Many of these challenges can be overlooked as unimportant, but they have an impact that is growing. With humor, anecdotes and real-time examples, Phipps points out what may be the crucial areas farmers should address to compete.

What's Working

Pointing out the problems is helpful, but many are experts at criticism. What makes this presentation memorable are the unique and innovative responses Phipps shares from across agriculture. Even better, Phipps adapts techniques and management skills from other industries to aid farmers in their struggle to cope. These are not universal panaceas, because agriculture is a collection of unique operations now. Instead, Phipps offers a range of sometimes startling and often simple steps producers can use to flourish in this new "normal."

Above all, Phipps seeks to give producers the initiative to imagine possibilities now available. By emphasizing the need to retain our traditional values, he shows how we can still modify traditional methods. Farmer obsession with productivity, for example doesn't mean much unless producers have alternative, productive uses for the time saved.

Not Foolish Hopes

You can farm today and be happy. What this life might look like may surprise many, but that is part of the fun. Phipps seeks to strengthen a sense of excitement and anticipation to counter the frustration brought on by tunnel-vision habits. Not all will agree with every idea, but all will encounter a new approach to this profession.

Phipps will serve as the keynote speaker with his presentation, "What if This is Normal?" at The Lancaster Chamber's 26th Annual Agriculture Industry Banquet Nov. 25. Phipps has entertained and informed ag audiences for years with his humor and commentary columns that appear monthly in Farm Journal and Top Producer magazines. Phipps will be joined by the master of ceremonies, Elliot Abrams, senior vice-president and chief forecaster for AccuWeather.

FFA, 4-H Champions Named At West Lampeter Swine Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

WEST LAMPETER (Lancaster Co.) — Judge Oscar Manbeck picked two champion hogs — one for 4-H and one for FFA divisions — at the recent West Lampeter Fair.

Champion FFA winner was Garrett Neff, Millersville. His 252-pound hog, which he purchased from a local farm, first won the light heavyweight division.

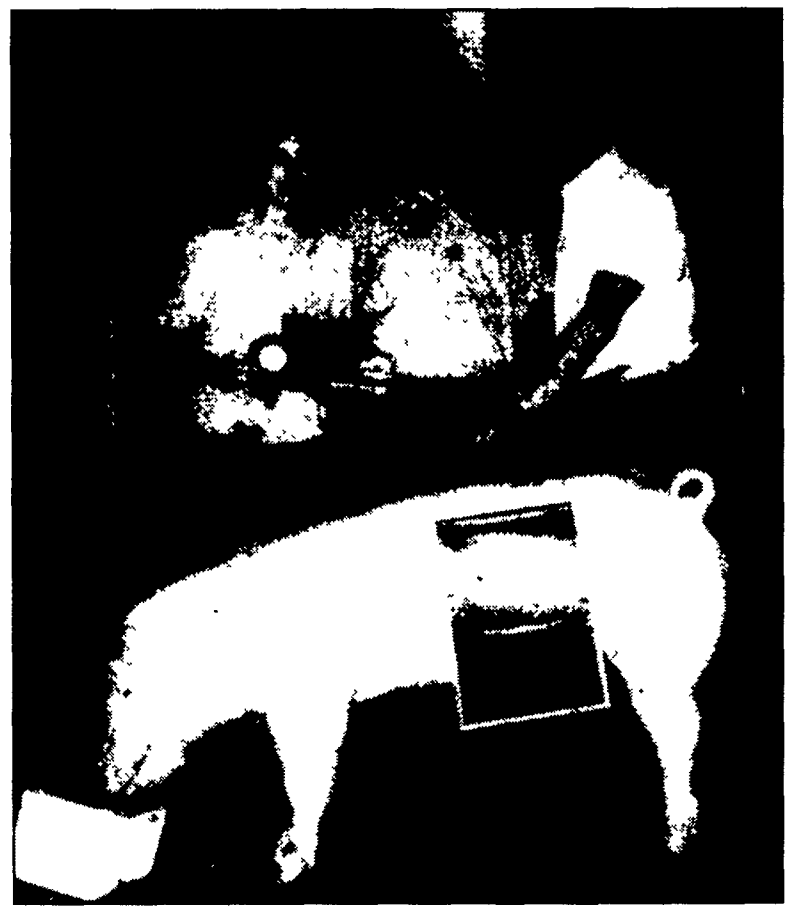
Neff, with six year of show ring experience, hails from a 45-acre corn, soybean, and tobacco operation. He brought two sheep and three hogs to exhibit at the fair.

A graduate of Penn Manor High School, he is the son of Gary and Dianne Neff. He hopes to operate his own farm, mostly crops, in the future. He helps part-time on the family farm.

Andy Hughes, 14, Lancaster, an eighth grader at Lampeter-Strasburg Middle School, also has six years of experience in the show ring. He brought one hog to the fair and came up big with that single hog, taking home grand champion 4-H placing in the market hog show.

The hog, "Stevie," comes from Keith Bard, Cambria county.

His sister, Allison, brought lambs to the fair. Andy, formerly a lamb exhibitor, now shows hogs exclusively. He is the treasurer of the swine club but also divides his time among the school band, track season, skateboarding, and playing the bass guitar in a band with friends.



Andy Hughes, left, exhibited the grand champion 4-H hog at the recent West Lampeter Fair. He is joined by Oscar Manbeck, judge, and Bud Dean, trophy sponsor.

Andy is the son of Chet and Marie Hughes, Lancaster.

Oscar Manbeck judged the show.

NASS Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

Editor's Note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

CROP FORECASTS

The Sept. 1 crop forecasts are in! Pennsylvania yields of grain corn and soybeans are expected to be near the levels of the 1999 drought, based on grower responses to the September Ag Yield Survey.

Corn yields as of Sept. 1 are forecast at 72 bushels per acre, down 26 bushels from last year and 55 bushels below the 2000 record high yield in Pennsylvania. The 72-bushel forecast for 2002 is down 18 bushels from the previous month's forecast as a result of drought conditions during August.

If realized, this yield forecast is only 2 bushels more than the 1999 yield of 70 bushels. At 68.4 million bushels for 2002, Pennsylvania grain corn production is expected to be 29 percent below last year and 50 percent below 2000.

Soybean yield is forecast at 28 bushels per acre, which is 5 bushels less than the August forecast. September yield is 7 bushels below last year and 15 bushels below 2000. This yield forecast is 1 bushel less than the 1999 drought-reduced yield of 29 bushels. Pennsylvania production is now forecast at 10.6 million bushels or 25 percent less than last year and 36 percent less than 2000.

Barley yield is expected to be 73 bushels, up 3 bushels from last year and unchanged from the Aug. 1 forecast. The expected 4.75 million bushel production in Pennsylvania is 13 percent above last year.

Pennsylvania-type tobacco expected production is 4.1 million pounds from 2,100 acres. This production is only 1 percent less than last year from 100 additional acres harvested. Maryland-type tobacco expected production is 2.41 million pounds from 1,300 acres. This production is 18 percent more than last year from 200 more acres harvested. (There is no forecast for Vector-type tobacco.)

Sweet corn contracted production (for processing) is expected to be 6,750 tons in Pennsylvania, 38 percent above last year. This increase is because of harvested acres increasing from 650 last year to 1,500 acres. Meanwhile, yields declined from 7.51 tons last year to 4.5 tons per acre in 2002.

Snap bean contracted production (for processing) is expected to be 9,180 tons in Pennsylvania, down 60 percent from last year. The decline is because of acres harvested declining from 7,900 acres last year to only 3,600. Yield also dropped from 2.87 tons last year to 2.55 tons in 2002.

Countdown To Census

The 2002 Census of Agriculture will be mailed to all growers across the nation in late December or in about three months.

Funding for agricultural research, education, services, and programs for growers of all size depends on state and county statistics from the Census of Agriculture. So it's important for Pennsylvania to count every farm no matter how small, even small, part-time, and hobby farms.

You only have to produce $1,000 of agricultural products or keep only a few head of livestock or equine to count as a farm for Census purposes. Remember, "Agriculture Counts" and we are counting on your response for an accurate Census. When you get the Ag Census form, please fill it out and return it right away. Thank you!

Ag Chemical Statistics New On Internet

Check out www.usda.gov/nass/ for the new "Ag Chem Database" icon. The data presented are actual chemical usage estimates based on personal interviews with growers all across the nation.

These statistics are not based on recommended label rates. Instead, each grower randomly selected for the survey was asked to use their chemical records to complete each survey. In this way, the statistics reflect how growers are actually using each active ingredient on various crops regardless of the label.

This information is important to growers because it is used as part of the review of tolerance levels for registering products under the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA) of 1996. It is important to get the facts so that others don't assume maximum label rates are being used on the entire crop.

On the Internet, active ingredient agricultural chemical use statistics are presented for various commodities, including percent acres treated, active-ingredient/acre/treatment, average number of treatments, active-ingredient/acre, and total active-ingredient used. All data can be searched by commodity, year, state, and active ingredient.

Search results can be obtained in Web format and as downloadable Excel files. For each individual active ingredient, commodity, year and statistic, dynamic U.S. maps of each use statistic can be generated. Agricultural chemical usage statistic data can also be seen in a graphic format.

Currently, this site contains the data from 1990 to 2000. We will continue to update the database annually. As this site is enhanced, we will also provide averages and totals of the statistics over years, states, and commodities.

This site provides interactive access to data from NASS, as part of a cooperative effort among USDA, the USDA Regional Pest Management Centers, and the NSF Center for Integrated Pest Management (CIPM). All data available have been previously published by NASS and have been consolidated at the state level.

Pa. Livestock Producers To Get Immediate Drought Aid

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dairy and livestock producers suffering under Pennsylvania's extended drought may be eligible for federal financial assistance through a new USDA drought relief program.

The new Livestock Compensation Program provides $752 million to offset skyrocketing feed and grain prices and plummeting forage and silage production for dairy, cattle, sheep, and buffalo producers.

The program is open to producers located in counties that have received primary disaster designation due to drought in 2001 or 2002. Forty-four of Pennsylvania's 67 counties received the federal disaster designation last year, and Pennsylvania Governor Mark Schweiker has requested the designation for 54 counties this year.

The assistance is coming at a time when cash flow is very tight on many livestock farms, according to Ken Bailey, Penn State associate professor of dairy marketing and policy.

"The drought, which also covers much of the western United States and Canadian prairie provinces, has reduced feed grain and forage production in Pennsylvania," Bailey said. "It also has elevated grain and hay prices nationwide. Farm profits are being squeezed at both ends, so this program will be well received by livestock producers in Pennsylvania — particularly dairy producers — who also are facing record low milk prices."

Pennsylvania livestock producers can sign up for the new program at their local Farm Service Agency (FSA) office starting Oct. 1.

"Counties that had disaster designation last year already are eligible for the program," said Richard Pallman, FSA executive director for Pennsylvania. "We'll know which additional counties will be eligible for this program in the next few weeks. It's important that producers keep checking with their local FSA offices."

Dairy Market Outlook

in milk prices for next year should be cautious, or at least wait until the next milk production report will be released. As of last Friday, the Class III average price for all of 2003 at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange was $11.88 per CWT. That's not bad. However, it indicates major weakness in the first half of 2003 with a strong rebound thereafter. Thus, producers who want to lock in prices for next year may want to consider a minimum amount of milk, say just 10-25 percent.

Try to avoid locking in 100 percent of your milk production for 2003 at this time. Look for further direction after next week's milk production report.

Junior Market Champions Sold At York Fair

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Pound for pound, the highest priced item at the annual York Fair junior livestock auction was not livestock at all.

Weightwise, the top-selling item was a cake, baked, appropriately decorated, and donated by former 4-H parent and 4-H supporter Lois Rankin. Rankin has been baking cakes for this sale for several years and they never fail to generate a hefty contribution toward sending the junior meats and livestock judging teams to national competitions.

In keeping with that tradition, Rankin's 2002 edition cake opened the sale to lively bidding. After 17 attempts at selling the cake, which buyers kept donating back, the cake was ultimately bought by auctioneer Harry Bachman. Bachman, again in keeping with tradition, gave the cake back to the juniors to enjoy after the sale.

The annual cake sale sets the mood for what continues to be well-supported junior livestock sales events, year after year, as the culmination of York Fair activities for youth exhibitors of market beef, hogs, sheep, and goats.

Jamie Welsh's 1,215-pound steer generated some additional excitement in the sale, as its price quickly escalated into four-figures, sold for $5,000, and was donated back for a second round. When the first bidding ended, Hoss's Steak and Sea House, headquartered in Duncansville, headed up the buying group. Others participating in the $5,000 champion market steer purchase included Re-Max Quality Services, Hanover; George and Joan Grim, Thomasville; Fletcher Farm, East Berlin; W.D. Ranch, East Prospect; Hoke Mills, Abbottstown; Hidden Lane Farm, Spring Grove; and Andgrove Fertilizer, East Berlin.

That group of champion steer buyers promptly donated it back, to be resold with the benefits to be given to the Cystic Fibrosis fund. Auctioneer Harry Bachman, Annville, repurchased the steer on an $800 bid for the charitable contribution on behalf of exhibitor Jamie Welsh, who has battled cystic fibrosis since childhood.

The reserve champion steer, with exhibitor Richard Heineman at the halter, weighed in at 1,140 pounds and set off another lively round of bidding. Winning bid for the runner-up, at $1,150, was Beasley Ford dealership of York.

Champion market lamb was exhibited by Andrew Bankert, Hanover, and weighed in at 126 pounds. Buyer of the champion, on a bid of $1,050, was Donald Musser, representing the York Community Courier weekly newspaper.

Reserve champion market lamb, exhibited by graduating 4-H'ers Lindsay Jones, East Berlin, followed in the sale lineup. Rick Jones handled the reserve winner for his sister, who had returned to college in Vermont. The lamb brought a final bid of $1,100 and was purchased by the Morrell Myers family of Thomasville.

Travis Flory, Red Lion, exhibited the grand champion market hog. While hog prices have crashed for commercial producers, youth supporters held fast in their bids for the junior exhibitors. Flory's 260-pound champion pig brought a final $1,000 bid and was purchased by Dan Long for Tuscarora Hardwoods, Elliottsburg.

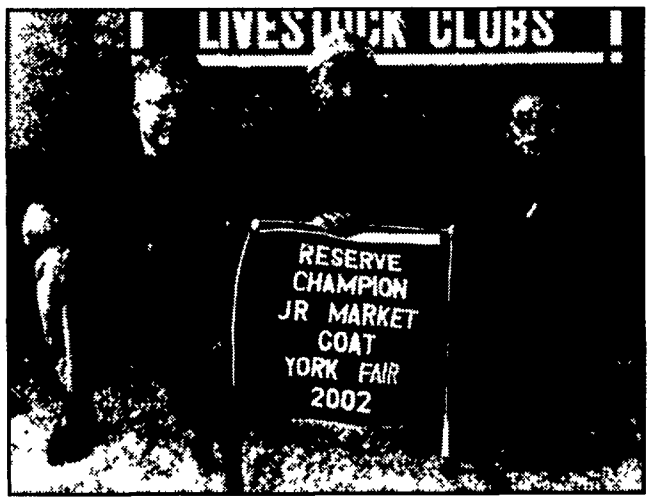
Even though Jessica Innerst, Red Lion, was absent the sale to compete in FFA activities, her reserve champion market hog commanded a price to boost her livestock account. The 249-pound porker sold for $625 and went to Todd Fisher Construction/Kuhn Brothers Log Homes, Red Lion.

A team of buyers made the winning bid to purchase the champion market goat, exhibited by young Chad Menges, Hanover. Menges' goat, weighing 102 pounds, earned the youngster $575 as buyers Feltch's Machine Shop, Vulcan Materials, Hosch Belt Scraper Company, and Cummings-Wagner Pumps and Machine Equipment, all of Hanover, chipped in to buy the champion.

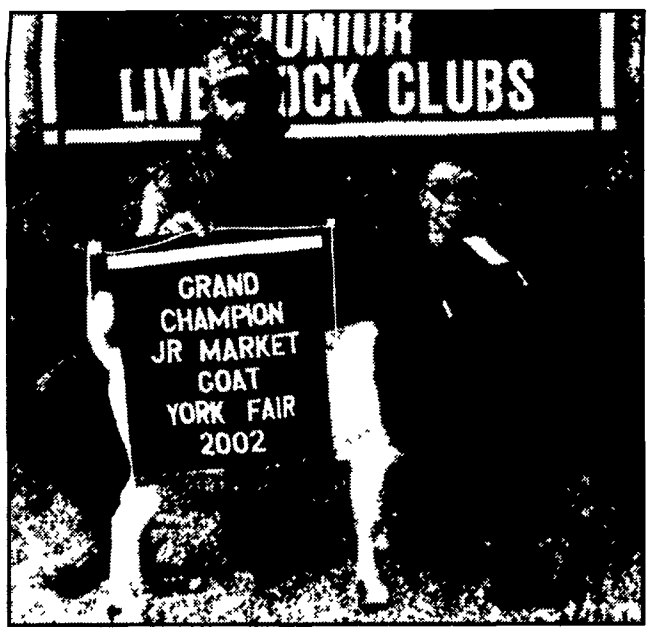
Menges followed a second time with his reserve champion market goat, weighing in at one pound less, and selling for $450 to the Drovers' Bank, a division of Fulton Bank.

York Fair's junior livestock sale included a total 175 head of animals and generated about $69,000 for the youth exhibitors. The 67 lambs averaged $238 with the champions and $213 excluding the champion prices. Nineteen steers sold, with a champion-inclusive average of $1,450, and an average of $1,259 minus the champions.

Swine totaled 73 head, averaging $253 with the champions and $237 without the champions. A total of 16 market goats were included in the sale, averaging $168 with the champions and $119 without the champions.

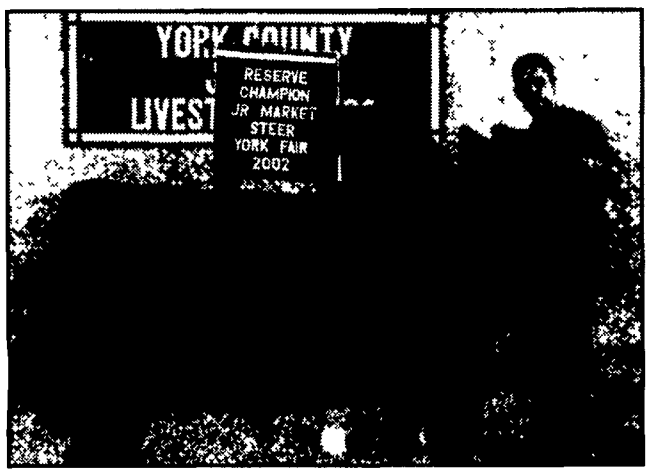


Drovers Bank was the buyer of the York Fair reserve champion market goat exhibited by Chad Menges. Representing the bank are Bradley Kline, left, and Jeff Bollinger.

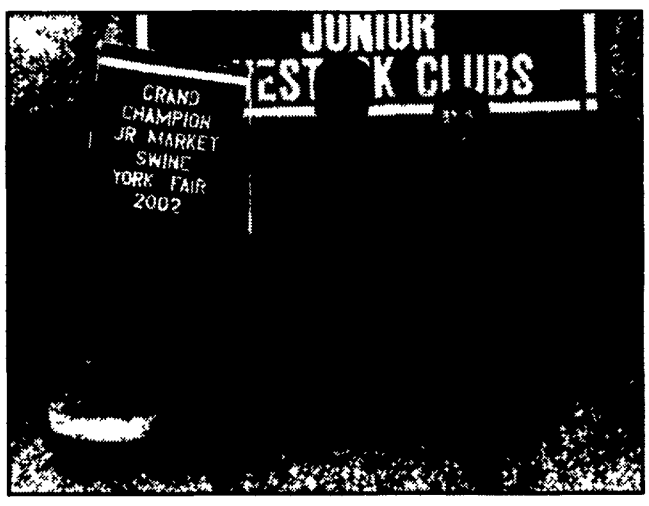


Chad Menges' champion junior market goat sold for $575 to a group of buyers, represented by Nate Menges.

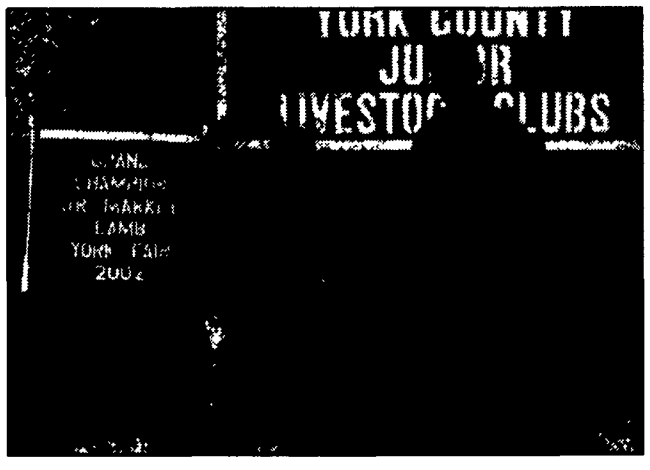
Jamie Welsh's York Fair champion junior market steer was purchased for $5,000 by Hoss's Steak and Sea restaurant, represented by Rob Billet and a consortium of seven other buyers. The steer was donated back for resale to benefit the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.



Carl Beasley Ford, represented by general manager Ed Baker, made the winning bid of $1,150 for Richard Neineman's reserve champion York Fair junior market steer.



York Fair champion junior market hog honors went to Travis Flory. Buyer of the champion winner was Tuscarora Hardwoods, represented by Don Long.



Andrew Bankert exhibited the champion junior market lamb at the York Fair. Displaying the banner for the buyer, The York Community Courier newspaper, is Matt Bankert.

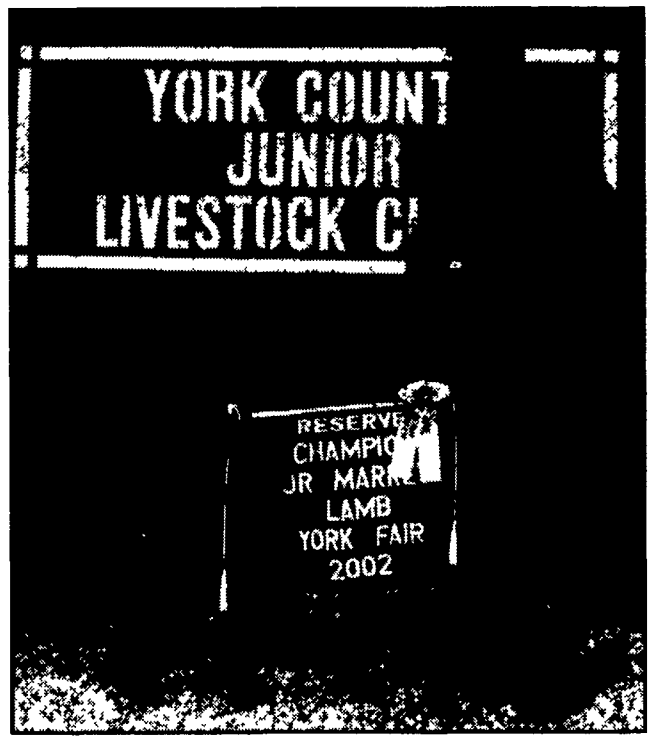
After baking and donating the traditional fund-raising auction cake for the York Fair junior livestock sale, Lois Rankin, second from right, was on hand as it generated $2,295 for the junior livestock judging team. With Rankin are team members, from left, Hope Long, Megan Heath, and Russ Wilson.



Rick Jones handles the reserve champion junior market lamb for his sister, Lindsay. Buyer of the runner-up lamb was the Morrell Myers family, represented by Carolyn Myers.

Belmont, N.Y. Pair Win Big In KILE Haflinger Halter Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Brenda Green and Gary Vaughn of Belmont, N.Y. dominated the Haflinger Halter Show with wins in the gelding championship class and grand champion mare.

Max GVF was selected as the grand champion gelding and the Vaughn's winning gelding, Mackenzied, was selected reserve champion.

To complete their trio of champion winners was their grand champion mare, Mareka AFH.

West Chester natives Jake and Grace Paulson exhibited the reserve champion mare, Lu-Gold MMH.

In the stallion competition, the entry exhibited by Spring View Farm of Bellefonte, Muskateer Lam, was selected champion stallion. Completing the champion pair was Steppin Star-SV owned by Melvin Stahl of Turbotville, who was the reserve champion stallion.

First-Timers Tops At Manheim Farm Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — This year was a year of firsts at the Manheim Farm Show.

Besides being the first year for the breeding beef show, first timers Cody Musser and Tyler Kulp won grand champion positions in the beef and dairy beef show.

In the showmanship competition, judge Chris Wojciechowski, Hagerstown, Maryland, encouraged exhibitors to avoid the "four-foot shuffle," using the show stick to position the animals legs as soon as they are stopped. Use the show stick to rub the calf's underline first and let it calm down, he said.

Wojciechowski, a professional cattle groomer, exhibits cattle or helps owners exhibit their animals, besides doing consulting work for purebred and commercial operations. A former participant on the livestock judging team at Delaware Valley College, where Wojciechowski graduated from with a degree in animal science, he judges approximately six shows a year.

He was complimentary about the eagerness of the kids to pick up on what I'm talking about and change what they have been doing.

In the breeding beef show, Adam Zurin's Shorthorn heifer, with "her future in front of her," according to judge Wojciechowski, took home grand champion honors. Adam also won grand champion showman in the beef show.

In the market steer show, Wojciechowski put animals with eye appeal, boldness about their head, and dimension over their ribs in the championship drive. "These steers are going to go out and hang up a good carcass for buyers," he said.

In his first year in the beef ring Cody Musser, a senior at Manheim Central, and "Mr. Forbes," a Belted Galloway from a producer in New Jersey, won grand champion honors. Cody saw Belted Galloways on C.J. Furlong's farm, where Cody works, and liked the unique appearance of the animals enough to pick one for himself at the end of last October.

This win strengthened his conviction to bring a "Beltie" back to compete next year. The calf won its class at the recent Eastern National competition in Maryland.

Cody has shown dairy beef for two years prior to this year and also exhibits hogs. He is from M&R Grain, a grain, cattle, and crop farm of 225 acres. This is his fourth year in Manheim Central FFA. He is the son of Jim and Sue Musser, Mount Joy. His brother, Dustin, has also exhibited animals at Manheim.

Ryan Donough, a Manheim Central graduate, and "Cougar" won reserve champion placing in the beef show. The calf was purchased from an operation in Juniata County. He also brought sheep and hogs to the Manheim Farm Show, part of a six-fair, plus Farm Show, circuit. Donough, who now works in a retirement community, is planning to attend college and pursue a degree in animal science.

His sister, Joelynn, also exhibited beef in the show. At home the Donoughs have 40 head of sheep, plus their club calves and club hogs.

In the championship drive of the dairy beef show, "as you look at them as a group, they're very

Waynesboro Woman Wins In Quarter Horse Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Horses from across North America competed in the Quarter Horse Show Sunday, Oct. 6 at the 46th Annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE).

Son* of a Gold Mine struck gold as the reserve grand champion in the A show. He also is owned by Victoria Doyle, Waynesboro. The B show reserve amateur champion stallion was Tested Investment, exhibited by Charles and Brenda Hill, Marion Center.

Advanced Copy, exhibited by Victoria Doyle, Waynesboro, continued his successful show day as the grand champion quarter horse stallion of the A show. And Son of a Gold Mine also exhibited by Victoria Doyle received ribbons for his repeat win as the reserve grand champion stallion in both quarter horse stallion shows. The B show grand champion stallion was Tested Investment, owned by Charles and Brenda Hill.

Winning both the amateur championship and grand champion gelding was RT Master Aaron, owned by Floyd Shoder,Linden. The Untouchable Kid remained untouchable as the reserve amateur and reserve grand champion in both shows.

Ag Preservationists Celebrate 51,000 Acres

Preserve Board and the Lancaster Farmland Trust. That's more than any other county in the nation.

The total value of the development rights that have been purchased by or donated to the two groups exceeds $100 million.

"The success comes from a long-standing partnership," said Lee Dmitzak, chairman of the Lancaster Farmland Trust. He noted that he did a little bit of asking and found out just what an acre represents.

"Fifty-thousand acres is 50,000 football fields, and that's amazing," he said.

Dmitzak said there are now 612 farms preserved in Lancaster County, with 460 saved by the ag preserve board, 145 by the trust, and seven jointly. He credited Amos Funk, who was at the celebration, with successfully battling to get the Internal Revenue Service to recognize donated easements as charitable contributions.

Preservationists point out that between 1980, when saving farms became an issue, and 1990, Lancaster County's population grew by 60,000 people, whose homes were built on 60 square miles of what had been farmland.

The Lancaster County Commissioners in the mid-1970s created a subcommittee and task force to study ways to preserve farmland. That resulted in the appointment in 1980 of a nine-member ag preserve board, and in 1982, the first perpetual deed restrictions on 218 acres were donated to the county.

A year later, the board became a department within county government.

Gene Garber, a West Donegal Township farmer who was the first to preserve his property through the trust, which was formed in 1988, said there is much more work to be done.

"Tonight is a night of thanksgiving, to be glad for what we've done, but it's also the kickoff for what needs to be done," said Garber, chairman of the ag preserve board and honorary trustee of the trust. " 'Lancaster County is something very special, and we have to keep that something special, and preserve it.

"I don't get carried away with the 50,000 acres — that's great, but we've got a couple hundred thousand more to go."

Speakers also included state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr. and Marilyn Ware, an honorary trustee of the Lancaster Farmland Trust.

Hayes said that within a matter of days, Pennsylvania will have preserved a total of 2,002 farms; that means about a third of them are in our county, out of a total 52 Pennsylvania counties involved in preservation.

"Lancaster County leads the way among all counties in dedicating their financial resources to this cause," Hayes said.

He spoke of homeland security, and said it pertains to preservation as well as defenses.

"Homeland security is preserving our farmland, and our farm families," he said.

Ware, who chairs the American Water Works Co., said she and Funk teamed up in helping to form the farmland trust in order to give Amish farmers another option.

"That has been a highlight in my life," she said. " 'It was an opportunity to be a voice."

Ware said local preservationists will share their views with national experts during a forum on saving farms to be held in Lancaster County in May, a meeting that will serve to save even more land.

"Impatience is a virtue as well," she said. "We have much to do."

prices.

When asked to comment on MPR, his comments were guarded and he noted there are issues being addressed.

In regards to the market reporting by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA), Cox said the USDA and the state work together to issue reports. He said Mark Butcher heads the state operation with another five reporters who cover the livestock markets throughout the state, most of not all of them published here in Lancaster Farming. He said that three laptop computers have been acquired for use by the state reporters.

"I do like this area," he said. In fact, he had already remarked about that several times during the interview.

Taylor, Maggie, 7-year-old Kylee, and 4-year-old Kaitlyn Cox have settled into a home in Lititz. Except for Taylor's sometime long work hours away from home reporting Lancaster County's livestock auctions, they, too, like it here.

similar. They have balance from front to end, and muscle, and that's not easy to find in this project.

"It is hard to pick beef calves out of a species where beef characteristics are not highly desirable." The animals were "trim through the lower one-third and not real wastey, which is hopefully good for whoever buys them and finishes them out," said the judge.

In his first voyage into the dairy beef ring Tyler Kulp, 15, a freshman at Manheim Central, and 667-pound "Petey" took home grand champion placing in the dairy beef show. The show included more than 30 calves.

Tyler's calf, from his home, Kulp Dale Farm, is part of a 110-head herd of Holsteins. The farm consists of 160 acres of corn, barley, and oats.

Tyler followed the example of his brother, Nathan, who had exhibited dairy beef prior to this year. The brothers exhibit Brown Swiss and Holstein animals at local fairs and the All-American Dairy Show.

Tyler chose the calf, a bigger-framed animal than its counterparts, on the advice from his grandfather and father. He is the son of David and Bea Kulp.

Adam Zurin, 15, a sophomore at Manheim Central, and 638-pound "Mac" won reserve champion placing. Adam, a four-year dairy beef veteran, is from a 30-acre farm in Mount Joy. He is the son of Gary and Judy Zurin, leaders of the Lancaster County Dairy Beef Club and chairpersons of the dairy beef show at Manheim Farm Show.

Adam picked out the calf from a nearby dairy farm in February.

The dairy beef show began four years at Manheim Farm Show as a way for 4-H'ers to get introduced to exhibiting beef animals with a lower financial commitment than buying a beef calf, according to Ken Zurin, who helped to begin the show.

Holstein Named Supreme Champion At Tioga Open Dairy Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent

WHITNEYVILLE (Tioga Co.) — "I'm overwhelmed with the quality of the cows that came out here this morning," said Owen Bewley as he prepared to name the supreme champion of the Tioga County Fair open dairy shows.

During the two-day event, Bewley judged more than 150 entries from seven breeds before naming Deep-Valley Start Sherry, a 4-year-old Holstein owned by Jim and Miffie Kahler, supreme champion.

Along with the honor of being named the supreme champion comes a $500 prize sponsored by area businesses.

The reserve grand champion Holstein was Gor-Wood-D Benefit Nike, a 5-year-old owned by Gor-Wood-D Holsteins. Mary Mosher swept the junior classes to take both junior champion and reserve junior champion honors. Standing in the junior champion position was Norkval Red Marker Linny, a fall calf. The reserve junior champion was Norkval Leduc Latifha, a fall yearling.

The Kahler family exhibited both the grand and reserve grand champions in the Jersey show. Named grand champion was Eastmont Trader Daisy, a 4-year-old owned by Jim and Miffie Kahler. The reserve grand champion was Eastmont Mannix Desiree, a junior 2-year-old owned by Lindsey Kahler. Named junior champion in the Jersey show was Lindsey Kahler's winter calf, Eastmont RD Lucinda. The reserve junior champion Jersey was Rebecca Black's Ty-Ly-View RLB Summer, a spring calf.

In the Red and White show, Vermilion Holsteins exhibited three of the four champions. Their senior 2-year-old, Vermilion Salic Tara Red, was named the grand champion of the day. She was followed by their 4-year-old, Vermilion Sly Peaches Red, who was named the reserve grand champion. A winter calf, Wil Jope Polled Brook red, owned by Katelynn Robbins, stood in the junior champion spot, and Vermilion Farm showed the reserve junior champion, Vermilion Blaze Lula Red, a winter calf.

One Lineback, junior 2-year-old Daisy Dupe, owned by Alisha Rucker, was named the champion of that breed.

Diesel Technology Forum

WASHINGTON, D.C. — From spray rigs to tractors and irrigation pumps, not a day goes by where diesel engines don't play an important part in some farming operation. In fact, two-thirds of all farm equipment is powered by diesel engines.

And diesel technology is vital to more than just America's farms. This $85 billion industry improves quality of life in many ways:

- Diesel buses move 14 million people to their jobs and schools every day.
- Diesel trucks, trains, boats and barges move 94 percent of the nation's goods — more than 18 million tons of freight each day.
- Diesel powers nearly all of the heavy equipment that constructs our roads, bridges, homes and schools.
- Ambulances, fire trucks, rescue vehicles and hospital backup generators all rely on diesel power.
- One-third of the fuel consumed by the U.S. military each year is diesel.

Now diesel power has a new champion in Washington, D.C. The recently formed Diesel Technology Forum is dedicated to raising awareness about the economic importance and essential uses of diesel engines, highlighting the continuous improvements in fuel efficiency and emissions, continuing progress to reduce the environmental impact of the existing fleet of diesel engines, and leading the way for future clean diesels in all applications.

Log on to the forum's Website, www.dieselforum.org, to find out more about clean diesel and make it your one-stop gateway for information and news on this critically important technology.

VERSATILITY

It's What The Harvestore® System Is All About

High moisture corn too expensive to purchase? Consider spring-harvested high moisture barley as an alternative.

Nelson Habecker of Lancaster, farming with the Harvestore System since 1971, ships over 2,000,000 lbs. of milk and processes all of his high moisture grains through his 20x30 Harvestore structure. He does it by refilling the structure with high moisture barley while it still has some high moisture corn in it. The Power Sweep Auger unloader provides him with some mixing action. Fed in a total mixed ration, it makes an excellent feed.

Two remanufactured Power Sweep Augers in stock for immediate sale!

KILE Lead Line Is 'Shear' Fashion

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Visitors at the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE) may be surprised to see a fashion show interspersed among sheep, swine, and cattle judging events, but the traditional event is a crowd-pleaser.

Called the Keystone Lead Line, the show is designed to promote the beauty of wool and the sheep breeds that produce fiber for warmth and style.

Contestants select their garments made of at least 80 percent wool. Bonus points can be earned if they carded or spun the wool or stitched the fabric for their outfits, but the outfit can be purchased. Contestants are judged on how appropriate their outfit is for their age and build. They are judged for their ability in controlling the sheep they lead around the show ring.

Fabric and styles worn by the contestants reveal wool's amazing versatility. Some are made of hefty worsted wools, but others are from wool fabrics so light they are comfortable during summer's heat.

More than 30 contestants were placed in one of three divisions according to their ages. In the senior division, Candice Marie Mascarenas, Huntsburg, Ohio, modeled a sophisticated 100 percent wool sweater coat from Ireland. She removed the cable knit coat to show off a jacket and trouser outfit that she had tailored. Her outfit was accessorized with a wool hat and leather gloves.

Candice is a 17-year veteran of lead line competitions. She has competed since she was three years old. Candice was twice crowned the Ohio Hampshire Sheep Queen in addition to many awards throughout her 10 years

Wool-Clad Exhibitors Attract Manheim Crowd

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The adult division at the Manheim Farm Show Lead Line attracted attention Monday evening when Dr. Zoann Parker, former state deputy secretary and county 4-H agent, led a Southdown ewe in competition.

Daina Savage, former ag editor for the Lancaster Intel, also competed with a Southdown ewe lamb.

Two mothers of children competing in the event also modeled wool outfits to promote the wool industry to Farm Show visitors.

Taking first place in the adult division was Nancy Martin who led her daughter Roanna's Suffolk ewe in the event. Nancy wore a 100 percent wool suit.

Parker placed second. She modeled a white boiled wool jacket complementing a wool jumper tailored by her mother. A twisted woolen yarn necklace accented the natural wool of the Southdown ewe that she led.

Third place went to Savage who modeled an elegant black sheath dress of lightweight Merino wool and a fitted plum-colored cardigan accented with rose-colored wool detailing. A black wool scarf from India lent a splash of decor to the lamb she led.

In the girl's division, first place went to Kelsey Binkley, Conestoga. Kelsey had placed first in last year's competition at Manheim and on Saturday, placed second at the Keystone International Livestock Expo in Harrisburg, where she wore the same purple, gray, and black boulce tweed suit that she had sewn.

Roanna Martin, second in the girl's division, wore navy blue wool slacks and plaid shawl that she made herself. Heather Stallman, Manheim, wore a multicolored sweater with wool pants. She led Nalla, a registered Polypay aged ewe, who flaunted a handbraided wool halter.

Only two 4-H'ers competed in

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

An appetizing aroma fills the kitchen on a gloomy, somewhat muggy, fall morning.

The enticing smell pushes away the damp, almost-musty atmosphere lingering after a prolonged stretch of tropical humidity.

It's one of those food scents that pokes a suggestive warmth into every corner of the house, evoking images of childhood days arriving home from school to Mom's good cooking.

Pot roast.

An ordinary chunk of beef, zipped up with a bit of bouillon flavoring, surrounded by potatoes, carrots and onions. What could possibly be more "comfort food" than a simple, homey pot roast? (They're also easy to fix, which for busy cooks is comfort of another sort.)

What categorizes something as a comfort food? Is it because you really like it. Because it makes you feel good? Because it's something that brings back that aura of safe, happy and well-fed childhood? Because it is tied to some significant or memorable occasion or event?

Probably all part of the "comfort food" imagery in our heads.

Mashed potatoes is a dish that seems to just naturally fall into the comfort food category. Fluffy, whipped spuds seem inherently tied to festive family gatherings, conversation around a cozy dinner table, and paired with such classics as meatloaf, roast beef, or for us die-hard "Pennsylvania Dutch" food lovers, buried under a mound of pork and sauerkraut.

On the other hand, The Farmer is also perfectly happy with a nice, steaming baked potato. Or even a tender, baked sweet potato, preferably with a thick slice of ham, one of his favorite comfort foods.

Ranking right up near the top of my personal comfort foods is soup. A hot, steaming bowl of homemade vegetable, or chicken corn, or maybe broccoli cheese. Occasionally on a snowy, wintry day, it will occur to me to concoct my own, homemade French onion, slathered with stretchy, melted mozzarella and croutons if there happen to be any on hand.

Recently, grandson Caleb has been sharing lunch with us on occasion, while supervising our harvest of high-moisture corn from the combine cab's passenger perch. He repeatedly reported home that he had noodle soup at grandma's, though neither noodles, nor soup, had been on any of those lunch menus. Finally, one day, I fixed some noodle soup, figuring that was perhaps comfort food for him.

Of course, two of the most traditional comfort foods for kids are macaroni and cheese, and hot dogs. Since most kids love hot dogs so much, we ought to find a way to make them healthier, with extra vitamins, minerals, maybe a little bran or wheat germ.

And then they probably wouldn't touch them.

Can pizza be considered comfort food? Why not?

Labeling pizza as comfort food is likely a dead giveaway to your age, and perhaps your upbringing. Lots of kids could survive on the ubiquitous sauce n'cheese, n'whatever else you like on them, doughy favorite. Homemade pizza is a cool-weather, Friday-night staple for our grandchildren, while Sunday evenings suit better for fixing homemade pizza in our kitchen.

It's also hard to beat a plain, old juicy hamburger, dressed up with tomato, onion, pickle, and lettuce. Proving that comfort food doesn't have to be fancy, or expensive or take long to fix.

And, in confession, after a long day of tackling the variety of jobs here, from milking and calf feeding to banging my head against computer glitches, few things are more comforting than settling down in the evening with a dish of ice cream and bag of potato chips.

Served with a fork on the side to fight off the food police.

Well Preserved

The Well Preserved news column is prepared by Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. It includes food preservation information and questions.

Jerky

What is jerky?

Jerky is meat that has been salted, seasoned, and dried until most of the moisture is removed. A pound of meat or poultry weighs about four ounces after being made into jerky. Because of its very low moisture content, it can be stored for several weeks without refrigeration and is suitable for school lunches and backpacking or camping trips. It is popular with children as a snack.

What meats are suitable for making jerky?

A variety of meats can be used to make jerky. Beef is commonly made into jerky, but jerky can be made from poultry, pork, venison, and even ground meats. Choose lean cuts of meat with as little fat as possible because the fat tends to go rancid during storage. Avoid highly marbled cuts. Lean flank steak and round steak are good choices for making jerky. If making jerky from ground beef, choose ground round, lean, or extra lean ground beef.

Are there any safety precautions that should be observed in making jerky?

The Food Safety and Inspection Service of the U.S.D.A. now recommends that meat be heated to and internal temperature of 160F before being dried to minimize safety concerns related to food borne illness caused by bacteria such as Salmonella or E. coli. Use a meat thermometer or an instant read thermometer to check the internal temperature. After heating the meat to 160F, the meat can be prepared for drying.

Catherine Cutter, department of food science at Penn State, presents the following useful information on food safety in making jerky.

Removing moisture from food prevents enzymes from contacting or reacting with it. Whether these enzymes are bacterial, fungal, or naturally occurring, preventing their action preserves the food.

If improperly cooked, homemade jerky may contain bacteria that can result in severe, life-threatening illness and possibly death. Heating the meat to 160F before dehydrating assures that any bacteria present will be destroyed by wet heat. Thus, the meat must be cooked first by baking or simmering before being placed in the dehydrator. Using the dehydrator alone will inactivate microorganisms but not kill them.

The right conditions of heat and moisture may cause the microorganisms to become active without the consumer being aware of a potentially dangerous situation. After heating the meat to 160F, maintain a constant dehydrator temperature of 130 to 140F during the drying process. This is important because the process must be fast enough to dry food before it spoils, and it must remove enough water to prevent microorganisms from growing.

How is jerky prepared for drying?

Remove as much fat from the meat as possible to prevent "off" flavors. It is easier to cut partially frozen meat. Cut it into thin strips—usually ¼ to ⅜ inch thick but it may be thinner if desired. Cut the meat on the crosswise grain for a less chewy jerky.

How is the meat cooked to the necessary 160F?

Cutter gives these directions for baking jerky in the oven or for simmering the strips of jerky before using a dehydrator. Using the oven method, place the jerky on cake racks with baking sheets underneath, and bake in a 325F oven. Check the internal temperature using a digital thermometer to make sure it has reached 160F. Proceed with directions for drying jerky in your dehydrator making adjustments in the listed length of time because you have already heated the meat. You can also dry the jerky in the oven. The temperature of the oven should be 170F or higher and the door should be propped open 2 to 6 inches. Circulation can be improved by placing a fan outside the oven near the door. It will take 5 to 6 hours to dry.

To simmer jerky in a marinade, prepare two to three cups of your favorite marinade and bring it to a rolling boil over medium heat. Add a few meat strips, making sure the marinade covers them. Reheat to a full boil. (It is not advisable to presoak the strips in marinade. Putting unmarinated strips into boiling marinade minimizes any cooked flavors and maintains the safety of the marinade). Remove the pan from the heat source. Remove the strips from the hot marinade and place them in a single, non-overlapping layer on drying racks. Dry the strips at 140 to 150F in a dehydrator, oven, or smoker.

You can use these additional methods for safe handling in the preparation of jerky. Use clean equipment and utensils. Keep meat and poultry refrigerated below 40F before use. Use ground beef and poultry within two days of buying or defrosting.

Defrost meat and poultry in the refrigerator-do not defrost on the counter at room temperature. Marinate meat in the refrigerator. Do not reuse marinades. Marinades are used to tenderize and flavor the jerky before dehydrating it.

What changes are needed to make poultry jerky? The cut strips of poultry should be cured for 24 hours in a brine solution at temperatures under 40F. After curing the poultry, rinse and soak the strips in cold water for 30 minutes. Then drain and arrange on a teflon-coated cookie sheet and place in a 325F oven for 1 hour. Check that the poultry has reached 160F with a thermometer. Reduce the oven temperature to 170F and heat until the meat exhibits the desired dryness.

How can you tell when the jerky is dried?

Allow a strip to cool for five minutes and bend it. Strips should crack but not break when bent and should not contain any moist or underdone spots. Refrigerate the strips overnight and check again for doneness. If necessary, dry strips further.

How is jerky stored? Blot off any excess fat. Some references have you wrap the jerky in a paper towel for several hours to absorb grease. Jerky will absorb moisture very easily from the air. So be sure to store it in an air tight container. Glass is a good long term storage container that is moisture proof and will also prevent odors from escaping. Also store it in a dark cool place. What is the shelf life of jerky? Depending upon the meat used, jerky should be used within one to three weeks. For longer storage, freeze the jerky to prevent rancidity.

For additional information about making jerky ask you local cooperative extension office for the free booklet, "Proper Processing of Wild Game and Fish."

If you have food preservation questions, a home economist is available to answer questions on Wednesdays 10 a.m.-1 p.m., call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Rm.1, Lancaster, PA, 17601.

Celebrating Diversity: Learning to Play Together

We live and work in a world filled with diversity. Our young children (2 to 5 years) are exposed to many different experiences every day through their play activities.

To ensure that children receive a well-balanced knowledge base, we need to provide a wide variety of opportunities. One such area is the celebration of our diversity. Parents and caregivers naturally provide activities that help children learn about the world around them. Through a child's play we can do the following: address a child's fear of differences, help children live cooperatively with others, prevent prejudices in children, and experience a wide variety of social environments

Children begin to notice differences very early in life. This classification process caries over from the toys and objects they play with to the people they encounter each day.

Many adults have had embarrassing experiences of being in a public place and the child pointing and loudly commenting on another person's differences - handicap, skin color or age.

As you can see from the development chart, children begin to make these associations very early in life.

Developmental Characteristics Charts for Children 2 years - Begin to notice gender and racial differences.

2-5 years - Learn appropriate gender labels: boy/girl. Learn names of colors and begin to apply to skin color.

3 years - Children notice physical disabilities. Show signs of being influenced by societal norms and biases. May show "prejudice" toward others based on gender, race or disability.

3-5 years - Children are trying to figure what aspects of themselves will remain constant.

Will I always be...? Can my skin change color?

4-5 years - Children will display what they think is gender appropriate behavior. Children will avoid other children because of race or disability - they are fearful of differences.

Parents and care providers need to incorporate time for children to explore their world.

Through a variety of activities children can experience new cultures. Highlighting the foods, music, clothing and celebrations of other lands makes the experiences real to children. Families can add activities into the child's daily schedule and celebrate diversity around the world.

• Foods: Select breads from around the world and discuss how they are created and served.

You might select pita from the Middle East, croissants from France; steamed buns from China, or soda bread from Ireland.

• Music: Listen to music from other lands noting the differences and similarities in rhythm.

Try to create the sounds you hear. Learn a song in another language like Fre're Jacques or Feliz Navidid.

• Clothing: Today clothing has a universal look but for celebrations or special occasions families may wear outfits of the past like: Japanese kimono, African kente, and Caribbean bashiki.

• Celebrations: Children love special events, so create a celebration for the children. By using the library for research on days to celebrate you can create a festival almost any time. Provide 'dress-up" clothes, snacks, play activities and music to set the stage for your celebration. Enjoy the celebration!

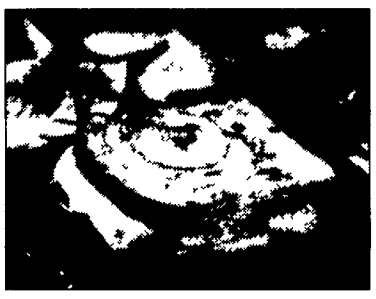
Pink Lady Apples were created just a few years ago in Australia, from a natural cross of Golden Delicious and Lady William apples, so this elegant, old-fashioned dessert is down under instead of upside down. The cake itself is based on great-grandma's hot milk sponge cake. It does take a little extra effort to pinwheel the thin apple slices in the bottom of the pan, but those few minutes are worth the praise you'll get when you bring this cake to table.

Tips To Select, Store Apples

- Select firm apples that are free of bruises.
- Handle apples gently to prevent bruising.
- Refrigerate apples to keep them crisp longer.
- Store apples in a ventilated plastic bag away from strong-odored foods.
- Coat apple slices and dices with apple or lemon juice to prevent browning.



Hoosier Apple Surprise Sammies combines cheese, apples, and peanut butter on raisin bread.

HOOSIER APPLE SURPRISE SAMMIES

4 tablespoons butter, softened
8 slices cinnamon raisin bread
½ cup crunchy peanut butter
4 slices mozzarella cheese
1 Golden Delicious apple, thinly sliced
8 slices cheddar cheese

Spread butter evenly on one side of each slice of bread. On the unbuttered sides of four slices of bread, spread equal amounts of peanut butter and top with slice of Mozzarella cheese. Place apple slices over cheese, and top each sandwich with two slices of cheddar cheese. Top with remaining slices of bread, buttered side out.

Preheat a large skillet or griddle over medium heat. Cook sandwiches in batches, if necessary, for 2-3 minutes per side, or until golden and the cheeses melted. Serve immediately.

Visually appetizing on the outside, apples are also packed inside with many of the good things you need to watch your weight and stay healthy — without unwanted fat and calories.

A medium-sized apple is fat-free, sodium-free, and cholesterol free. That makes apples a healthy snack or ingredient choice. In addition, apples are an excellent source of fiber — more than most hot or cold cereals. All this, and only 80 calories per serving.

Although fresh, crisp apples are a favorite among consumers, apples also are versatile in many cooked dishes.

Hundreds of varieties of apples are available throughout the world. One of the more recent varieties is the Pink Lady created in Australia and winning fans all over the world for their remarkable sweet-tart taste and crunch.

If you have access to the Internet, go to www.clabbergirl.com for more recipes, articles, and baking tips. Visit www.pinkladyusa.com for more information about this new apple variety.

Go ahead, experiment — try this recipe with different varieties, too.

PINK LADY DOWN UNDER CAKE

3 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup brown sugar
2 Pink Lady apples, cored, thin-sliced
2 eggs
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Measure 3 tablespoons butter and brown sugar into 9-inch round cake pan or 8- or 9-inch springform pan and place in oven while you preheat to 350 degrees and gather all ingredients. When butter is melted, remove pan from oven. Stir to combine with brown sugar. Spread evenly over bottom of pan. Arrange apple slices tightly overlapping in circle over brown sugar/butter mixture. Use smaller slices for center. Set aside.

In large mixing bowl, beat eggs at high speed until thick and lemon-colored, about 3 minutes. Add sugar and vanilla and beat another 2 minutes. While eggs are beating, heat milk and butter together in saucepan or microwave until butter melts.

In medium bowl, stir together flour, baking powder, and salt. Add flour mixture to beaten eggs and beat just until blended. Add hot milk and butter, and beat until blended. Pour batter over apples in pan. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven until top springs back when lightly touched with a sharp knife. If you used a cake pan, place a serving plate on top of pan, then invert and lift off pan so cake comes out upside down. For springform pan, carefully remove the ring then place serving plate on top of cake and invert. Using a spatula or knife, move any apples or sugar mixture left in the pan to the top of the cake. Serve warm or at room temperature. Top with whipped cream if desired.

Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension
Home Economist for Berks Co.

Now that it is back to school season and your children are on the run, it is especially important that they receive proper nutrition to help maintain a resistance to infections. Children often cannot consume the amount of food in regular meals that will meet all of their dietary needs, so snacks are a great way to add extra nutrients to their diets.

Unfortunately candy, soft drinks, cookies, cakes, and chips are frequent snacking choices among children, these foods are often high in sugar or fat, and contain little protein, vitamins, or minerals.

Eating a lot of high-calorie, low-nutrient snacks can contribute to tooth decay, obesity, and extra calories at the expense of other nutrient needs. Choosing snacks with nutritional benefits is important for people of all ages, but it can be especially critical during the growing years. Yesterday's high calorie desserts frequently become tomorrow's snacks.

Therefore, when you select snack foods, you need to keep the main goal in mind, which is maintaining a balanced diet. This school season, make snacking fun by letting your children have a piece of the action.

Try some of these fun ideas:

• With a cookie cutter or paper pattern in place, let your children create animals, people, or shapely creations from whole wheat bread.

• Make a fruit or vegetable spread such as grated carrots and raisins moistened with yogurt, crushed pineapple with cottage cheese, or grated cabbage. These spreads make great dips for carrot and celery sticks.

• Try quenching your child's thirst with a fruit shake made with milk, juice, fruit, and a scoop of vanilla ice cream and blend until smooth. This way, you can give your child a tasty snack while adding vitamins, calcium, and protein to their diet.

Other snack ideas for your children: Juicy: fruits; Crispy: pumpkin seeds, cucumber strips, toast, cereal mixed with nuts; For warmth: soups, or apple cider; For thirst: vegetable or fruit juices Try out this fun and nutritious recipe with your children today.

Crunchy Bananas

2 ripe bananas
½ cup wheat germ, shredded, OR ¼ cup chopped peanuts
½ cup orange juice

Cut bananas into one-inch slices. Pour one of the crunch foods into a flat plate. Dip the banana slices in the orange juice; then roll them in one of the crunchy foods until the banana slices are covered. Serve each slice on a toothpick or pretzel stick.

Stream MAPS
of Pennsylvania, New York, New England, New Jersey, Ohio, & Maryland/Delaware

LOST STREAM MAP

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Why every angler and boater needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the anglers catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into...there's a sure way to up your odds...simply try new fishing waters. Now, with this map you can find hidden streams and lakes.

Pennsylvania, New York, New England, New Jersey, Ohio and Maryland/Delaware are loaded with great fishing holes...many of them overlooked. Thousands of miles of streams, rivers and lakes are now easy-to-locate on one map.

The 3-foot-by-5-foot Pennsylvania map shows 45,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 3 1/2-foot-by-4 1/2-foot New York map shows 65,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 3-foot-by-4-foot New England map shows 36,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 2 1/2-foot-by-3-foot New Jersey map shows 8,300 miles of streams plus lakes. The 3-foot-by-3-foot Ohio Map shows 29,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 2-foot-by-3 1/2-foot Maryland/Delaware map shows 12,000 miles of streams plus lakes.

Professor Higbee's® Stream Maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind.

Kids Compete In Agri-Kid Olympics, Pedal Power

Some children screamed when the Knight in Shining Armor came stomping near, but others ran up to grab the hand of this popular 10-foot tall tin man during KILE Family Day.

Some participants in the Kiddie Power Tractor Pull were smiling when they started but groaning before they reached the finish line.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At the Keystone International Livestock Exposition more than 5,000 horses, beef cattle, sheep, and swine from 28 states and four provinces competed in the show ring Oct. 1-7.

On Saturday a different type of competition took place. Children 3-12 displayed muscle power, agility, and stamina as they competed in Agri-Kid Olympics. Lebanon Valley Farmers/Fulton Bank sponsored the farm-related events that included sack races, wheelbarrow races, laughing contest, horseshoe pitch, and hog calling.

The Kiddie Power Tractor Pull sponsored by Evergreen Tractor Sales, Lebanon, encouraged kids to exert their strongest force as they pushed and strained to pull 80 plus pounds with a pedal tractor.

Kessler's Barnyard provided the opportunity for kids to observe farm animals up close and personal. Some, such as the sheep with newly born twin lambs could be petted. Ducks splashed in an indoor pool, and chicks hatched beneath incubator lights.

Stomping around the Farm Show Complex was Tall Tex, who masqueraded as a 10-feet tall scarecrow, cowboy, knight in shining armour, and Uncle Sam. Some kids screamed and fled from the towering giant as he tromped around. But other children ran to shake hands and pose with the unusual character.

An estimated 10,000-12,000 people attended the week-long event.

Dackerie Bowes held by her mother Angela Lovell Bowes gets an early introduction to sheep care while her grandmother Marian Lovell and Aunts Annette and Malina Lovell watch. The Lovell family operate Maple Spring Farm in Linden. Annette works as a shepardess for Hollystone Farm, Paoli. The Lovell family has raised sheep and exhibited at KILE for many years. While growing up, the daughters also competed in KILE lead line competitions. Malina, left, placed second in the adult division on Saturday.

Tractor pull champions in the 3-4 year division is Chance Norris, 1; and triplets Justin, Emilie, and Alyssa Lytle, 4.

Nathan Moser, 10, pedals to victory while second and third-place winner Chris MacCauley look on.

Trophy winners in Agri-Kid Olympics, from left, include Chance Norris, 4; Garrett Livingston, 7; Shane Good, 7; Nathan Parsons, 10; Nathan Moser, 10, and Derick Brehm, 10.

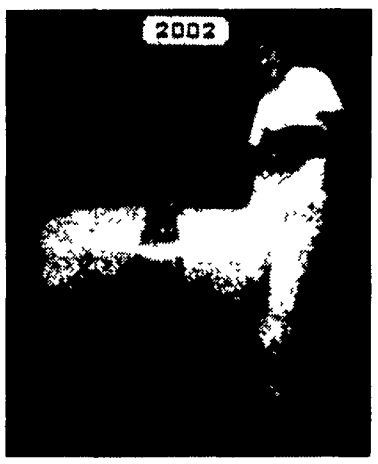
Rockingham County Fair Names Supreme Grand Champions

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

HARRISONBURG, Va. — Laura Sponaugle, treasurer of the Port Republic 4-H Club, felt waves of pleasure at the Rockingham County Fair when her three Suffolk/Hampshire crossbred lambs were named supreme champions in single and pair shows.

The 16-year-old Grottoes resident and Spotswood High School junior, during post-fair week, said she was still trying to reclaim some needed rest after the annual event in which she showed three hogs that took supreme champion in the swine single and pair shows.

"We weighed in five lambs (showing three is the limit). I worked with all five all month, so any of them could have gone," Sponaugle said of her sheep. At the last minute, the one she planned to take didn't appear as well as she had hoped, so she chose one of the others for the individual event.



The 2002 supreme champion market lamb at Rockingham County Fair was exhibited by Laura Sponaugle, 16, Grottoes. The Suffolk/Hampshire crossbred weighed 130 pounds. Ashley Good, not pictured, Harrisburg, had the reserve.

"My single lamb was not the one I intended to show," she said.

"This year I really put my animals first," said the daughter of John and Pam Sponaugle, owners of a 90-acre farm that supports crops, some 120 brood ewes, 80 lambs, at least a dozen purebred Suffolk and Cheviots, four turkey houses and 25 beef cattle.

"I put them before a job and other things," the teen-ager said, "and I could see it really paid off."

The sacrifice of time with friends was the downside of making a mature commitment, however, as her mornings and evenings were spoken for. Activities with chums as often as she would have liked just weren't possible.

It was a banner year in showmanship too. The 2002 fair found Sponaugle winning senior showmanship for the third year.

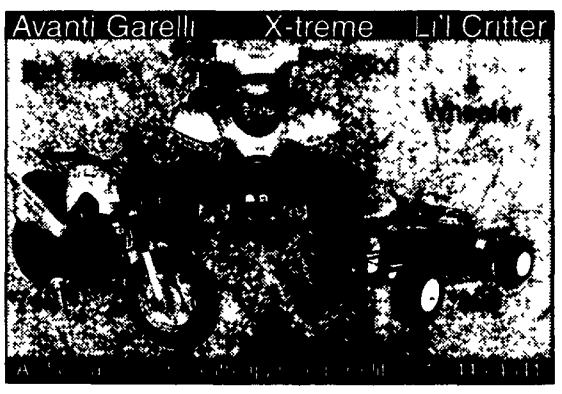
"I'm pretty proud of that, because it's me instead of the lamb," she said.

She was the intermediate showmanship winner in the swine show. In fact, a few weeks from now, at the Virginia State Fair in Richmond, she will compete again with swine, sheep, and purebreds.

Sponaugle, who has an older sister, Sarah, said that ever since her dad, a few years ago, was diagnosed with Parkinson's Disease, therapy has been her career choice. She hopes to study and accomplish this training at the nearby James Madison University in Harrisonburg.

Otherwise, in the lamb singles show, Veronica Paulson had the middleweight champion; Jeffrey Long, lightweight champion; and Laura Ford, the middleweight reserve champion.

Lamb pairs lightweight champion was shown by Andreas Paulson, middleweight champion Brooke Kemper, lightweight reserve champion by Robbie McCammon, and middleweight reserve champion by Jennifer Good.



Dennis Smith, Bergton, chaired the show. Scott P. Greiner, Virginia Tech, judged the event.

STEERS

The 1,340-pound Angus crossbred steer exhibited by 14-year-old Alissa Michael of Port Republic, took supreme champion honors. "Goober" was purchased from Classic Farm, Jackson Mill, W.Va.

In his class, the steer earlier took first place at the ABC Jackpot Show in Frederick, Md. At the Black Magic Show in Rockingham County, he was third overall.

The daughter of Steve and Dawn Michael, Michael is the vice president of the Port Brownlee Republic 4-H Club, who only began showing steers in 2002. In following the footsteps of her 18-year-old brother Steven, however, she's been showing purebred Herefords since age 8.

One of her Hereford cows, she said, won grand champion in the open and junior show.

With the money from Goober's sale, Michael stated her plans to purchase two more steers for 2003 are firm. "I decided it will be more fun to have an extra one." Her decision was prompted by the four steers her cousins showed this year.

Ashley Good, 17, Harrisonburg, had the steer reserve grand champion. The lightweight champion belonged to David Liskey, Harrisonburg and lightweight reserve champion went to Trenton Kyger, McGaheysville.

The middleweight champion belonged to Alissa Michael, Port Republic and the middleweight reserve champion to Ashley Good, Harrisonburg.

Jennifer Good, Harrisonburg, had the heavyweight champion and Sarah Joseph, Elkton, the heavyweight reserve.

Chairperson of the steer show was John Weston of Harrisonburg. Dr. Erskine Cash from Penn States Animal Science Department judged the show.

In steer fitting and showmanship, champions were senior division — Kymberly Hammer, McGaheysville; intermediate division — Brooke Kemper, McGaheysville; and novice division — Denny Jerrells, Elkton.

SWINE

Dezirae Allman, 14, Dayton, exhibited the supreme champion swine with a 260-pound Yorkshire/Hampshire crossbred.

"It looked good, but we didn't think it would win," said the Turner-Ashby High School sophomore.

In the 2002 fair, she showed three sheep, two steers and three hogs.

"It gives me something to do, and its a lot of fun," the teen-ager said.

"Pigs you don't have to halter break, but lambs and steers you do," said the daughter of Phil and Roberta Allman. Her sister, Amisha Botkin, 16, leans toward showing chickens; but owing to poultry health concerns, unfortunately, this time around she had to bear up under disappointing ban on poultry from the 2002 fair.

The Allmans raise Holstein steers for the market on the 30-plus acres that comprise their farmstead.

Allman's champion earned a nice sum at the fair sale. She said it will be re-invested in other animals for next year.

The single lightweight division champion belonged to Lee Keyser, Mount Crawford. Luke Kiser, Dayton, had the lightweight reserve.

Jordan Liskey, Bridgewater, had the medium weight champion and Sarah Secrist, McGaheysville, reserve.

Twelve-year-old Caity Armentrout of Mount Crawford had the supreme Champion swine pair — Yorkshires named Wilma and Charlene. Together they tipped the scales at 495 pounds.

Although they originated in Indiana, Armentrout purchased them in Berryville.

Armentrout enjoys showing at such events as the ABC Bonanza Jackpot Show and the Eastern Regional Shorthorn Show in Maryland.

She had a full plate, handling two steers, two heifers, three pigs, and two sheep.

She, her mother Sheila Bowman, and brother Ethan, 10 (owner of the grand champion Hereford bull), live little more than a stone's throw from Klear View Farm, where her granddaddy keeps poultry and steers. An uncle is nearby too, and keeps a herd of Herefords.

The Montevideo Middle School seventh grader said a number of different critters maintained at the homestead includes three braying donkeys that her mom especially enjoys.

"They are really annoying," Armentrout said, volunteering an opinion, "and wake you up in the morning."

Pairs champion in the lightweight division belonged to Megan Star Liskey. Ashley Good, Harrisonburg, had reserve.

In the heavyweight division, Jennifer Good's pair was champion and Derek Miller had reserve.

Richard W. Ritchie, Hinton, was show chairman. Dr. Allen Harper, Tidewater AREC, Suffolk, judged the show.

In showmanship, Jason Colaw, Hinton, won the advanced division. Intermediate division winner was Laura Sponaugle. Novice division champion was Laura Ford, Mount Crawford.

The Rockingham County Fair supreme champion swine is exhibited by Dezirae Allman, 14, Dayton. The Yorkshire/ Hampshire crossbred pig tipped the scales at 260 pounds. Reserve, not pictured, was exhibited by Laura Sponaugle, Grottoes.

with the 4-H sheep program. Candice continues to stay active while raising and exhibiting Hampshires in her home state.

Second place in the senior division went to Melana Lovell, Linden. She wore a sun-kissed yellow wool crepe fully-lined dress and jacket that she made herself. Her Dorset yearling ewe wore a black scarf that matched Melana's black wool felt hat.

Melana owns approximately 100 sheep and has 32 breeding and market sheep in her show string this year. The youngest of four daughters of Ralph and Marian Lovell, Melana grew up watching her sisters compete in lead lines.

In her first year of lead line, Katy Nolte, Mt.Airy, Md., placed third. She wore a long-sleeve navy blue fitted dress accented with a blue plaid wool scarf.

Katy, 15, led a Southdown yearling ewe named Lily wearing a bow made of the same fabric as Katy's dress.

In the intermediate division, Lindsey Beatty, Enon Valley, placed first; Kelsey Binkley, Lancaster, second; and Jennifer Mason, Worthington, Mass., third.

Lindsey, 12, wore a reversible wool gabardine cape and slacks and led a Polled Dorset lamb.

Kelsey Binkley, Lancaster, shows Dorsets and market lambs in many county and state competitions. The 12-year-old wore a purple, gray, and black boucle tweed suit that she made with a little help from her mom.

Jennifer Mason, 11, said that she has entered many lead lines in her home state of Massachusetts, but that KILE was the first one where she placed in the top three. She wore a purple tea-length wool sleeveless dress with a short-sleeve coordinating jacket.

Junior division winners were Sarah Skoloda, Newtown; Suzanna Macleod, Millers, Md.; and Emily Butts, New Park.

Sarah, 9, kept control of her Corridale yearling ewe while modeling a black wool skirt topped with a black and white checkered jacket with frog closure. Showflake wore a matching wore scarf.

Suzanna, 10, wore a purple long-sleeved wool dress and carried a matching shoulder bag. She accented the dress bodice by stitching on colored appliques and on the shoulderbag.

She lead one of her brother's Southdown yearling ewes.

Emily, 10, wore a fuchsia colored jumper that she made herself, and led a Suffolk that she bred and owns.

This year, Anthony Stephen Torre, Huntsburg, was the only male contestant. The 9-year-old looked quite handsome in a Ireland knitted sweater with a motif of a sheep and border collie, knickers, knee socks, and Irish flat cap. The outfit is typical of those worn by boys his age that he saw during his family's visit to Ireland last November.

Lead line judges at KILE were Julie Sterner, former contestant from Dover; Louise Wagner, sheep breeder; and Stacy Taylor, former contestant from State College.

Joan Miller, chairperson for the competition, also handed out the Woman in Ag award, which recognizes outstanding contributions to the sheep industry. Yvonne Trostle was applauded for her outstanding encouragment in helping many 4-H'ers with livestock and sewing projects.

Clyde and Dorothy Brubaker, nationally known Hampshire breeders from Robesonia and KILE exhibitors for 43 years, were surprised with a cake marking their 45th wedding anniversary. Their daughter Sarah Fleener and daughter-in-law Ginger Brubaker served the cake to KILE visitors, many of whom have developed close friendships with the Brubakers through their years of exhibiting.

In her first year of competing, Katy Nolte places third in the adult division.

Kelsey Binkley, left, took the spotlight for the second year in a row when she placed first at Manheim Lead Line girl's competition. Roanna Martin, center, placed second; and Heather Stallman, third.

the boy's division. First place went to veteran winner Radell Peters and his sheep Shania. Radell wore black slacks and a western-style wool shirt with beige stripes and sleeves, which his mother had made. Included in Radell's outfit was his wool cowboy hat and woolen socks.

Doug Musser and his woolly friend Buddy placed second. Doug wore a wool patterned sweater and wool trousers. A navy wool scarf tied around Buddy's neck complemented Doug's attire.

Judges for the event were Karen Hess, teacher; Irene Stoltzfus, mother of former leadline participant, and Kathy Vogt, former 4-H sheep club mom. Contestants were judged on their outfits, the fitting of their sheep, poise, and the ability to control their sheep in the show ring.

Manheim Farm Show Queen Ceremony preceded the lead line competition. Trina Piaskowski crowned Carla Martin as her successor. Carla is the daughter of David and Robbin Martin. Carla continues to help on the family dairy farm while taking classes at Lancaster Bible College, coaching at Manheim Christian Day School, and working part-time at Kreider's Restaurant and Mount Hope Home.

Runnerup was Nicole Kready, daughter of Gerry and Melva Kready. Other contestants were Bobbi Bentzel, daughter of Ed and Linda Bentzel, and Abbey Lehman, daughter of Gary and Kay Lehman.

Manheim Farm Show Queen Carla Martin is the daughter of David and Robbin Martin, dairy farmers in Manheim.

QUESTION — Becky Marshall wants to know where to find saddle seat clothing at reasonable prices. Or the name and telephone number of a person who makes them.

QUESTION — A reader is interested in purchasing a large cream separator and a butter churn capable of making 40 pounds butter or more per batch. Any information on these would be appreciated.

QUESTION — Raymond Fisher, 531 Millheim Narrows, Rebersburg, PA 16872, wants to know where to purchase a 2-gallon glass butter churn jar only with the opening measuring approximately 5½-inches in diameter. Also wanted is a small scale milk jugger (bottler).

QUESTION — A Millersburg reader writes that he has a cream separator model 100LPS Delaval tin with a missing float. He will consider trading it for a stainless steel bowl and motor for another cream separating unit that has the two spouts and the separating discs. He has no idea what model it takes but writes that it is a good chance it might be a Delaval. Separating cone measures 6¼-inch in diameter. The number on the cone is 3518895. Can someone help or direct him to help? Write to 319 Minnich Rd., Millersburg, PA 17061.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

The other week I attended a banquet celebrating 65 years since the Rural Youth of Lancaster County was established. Only a few of the original members are still around. However, it was a very active group and they produced 37 plays and held square dances every month.

In 1945 membership grew from 80 to 140 young people. This social group also had an orchestra. Trips were taken to New York City and many places in Pennsylvania. They also published a small newspaper which was mailed to 250 members for one cent each.

My husband was not able to attend the recent banquet as he had just come home from the hospital. The operation did not accomplish the hoped for results, but he is able to walk around. Since then he has even helped to fill the silo on the farm. He has many ideas about things he wants to do outside.

Our oldest grandson, who lives in Maryland, surprised us with a visit a few weeks ago. He is teaching physics and English in a private school near Washington, D.C. He declared that the meal that I prepared for him was quite different than his usual meals. We had a pork roast, mashed potatoes, gravy, baked corn, asparagus, cole slaw, bread, jelly, and a cherry cobbler for dessert. We enjoyed hearing of his trip through Europe this past summer.

All through the dry summer I've been carrying one sprinkling can of water to a few plants every other day. One plant was a gift of a small butterfly bush. Another was a tiny azalea plant from Georgia. Still another that got watered was a large parsley plant. And, I've planted blue morning glory plants next to a crab apple tree so that they can climb up its trunk. I'm really hoping they will bloom before too cold weather comes our way.

QUESTION — Bob Fleckenstein, Woodstown, N.J., wants to know if anyone has a plastic wheel to fit a plastic truck named Blippo, which measures 9¾X18½-inches. The wheel is 3-inches wide and the axle is 8-inches long and square.

QUESTION — Michael Trombley Jr. has a Norm's Dairy "pyroglazed" milk bottle from Albany, N.Y. Trombley wants to know how much it is worth.

QUESTION — Helen Shaffer, Lansdale, wants to know how to get rid of sparrows nesting behind shutters. She tried chasing them out to no avail.

ANSWER — Stephen Lapp, Kirkwood, wanted to know where to find a part for an old Waltham 15-jewel watch that needs a new sleeve. Thanks to L. Nolt, Leola, who recommends Samuel Hurst Watch and Clock Repair, Terre Hill. Call (717) 445-5219.

Another reader recommends Mahlon Shetler, 12580 Smith Rd., S. Dayton, NY 14138. If the parts aren't available Mahlon manufacturers the pieces himself. According to the reader, Mahlon is a very gifted watch repairer.

ANSWER — Gary Van Horn, Snyder County, wanted the names of persons or companies that move houses. He has a farm house to move back from the main road. A Leola reader recommends Verling H. Wolfe Co., 115 Club Rd., Bethel, PA 19507 or call (610) 488-1020 or (717) 933-4246.

Barbara Ruork, Lionville, recommends Charles Mullen, Advanced House Moving Inc., R.R.3, Box 31641A, Mount Holly, NJ 08060. Call 1-800-446-2168

Another reader recommends Dale Aungst House Movers. Phone (814) 784-3600.

ANSWER — A reader from the central part of the state is looking for two pieces of discontinued Tupperware. Shirley Orfanella, Quarryville, writes that replacements can be ordered through Cathy Brown, 30 Little Britain Rd., Nottingham, PA 19362 or call (717) 529-2572.

ANSWER — A reader requested instructions on how to dry flowers in the microwave. Thanks to Shirley Orfanella, Quarryville, for sending in instructions, but she writes that of the 5 or 6 drying methods she uses, the microwave is her least favorite but it's fast. Perhaps Shirley could send instructions for her favorite methods. Here is the microwave instructions: Cover the turntable with kitchen paper and arrange flowers in a single layer making sure no two items touch. Process on low about 3 minutes. Time will depend on type of flowers and micro wattage. Check ever 30 seconds near end of time. Remove when crisp. A few seconds too long will make them too brittle. Best to experiment with your least favorites.

ANSWER — R. Stoltzfus, 6039 Wanner Rd., Narvon, wanted to know where to buy "The Greatest Story Ever Written." Claudia Myers, P.O. Box 35, Mattawana, PA 17054 writes that she has a paperback copy of "The Greatest Book Ever Written," by Fulton Oursler. If Stoltzfus wants the book, he can have it at no charge except compensation for postage to mail the book.

Living Historians Refuse To Allow Sharpsburg Soldiers To Die

Justin Mearkle of Hagerstown is a believable German soldier boy.

"A soldier only dies when his memory is forgotten,"

Re-enactor who wore a wool uniform.

A festival goer looks over a mortar display from W.W.II.

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

SHARPSBURG, Md. The third weekend of each September brings about the annual Sharpsburg Heritage Festival.

On those few days, the population of this small town multiplies many times and residents as well as re-enactors bring the historic era of the Antietam Civil War battle, fought on the 16th and 17th of September 1862, to life with men, women, and children bedecked in period costume.

Some, such as the gentleman portraying General Custer are so realistic you think that, just maybe, you have been whirled about in a time capsule.

Crafts, photos, constant musical entertainment and shuttle trips to the battlefield or wagon rides through this historic village make the festival a well attended event. Wafts of curly fries, hot sausage, hot dogs, and other festival fare tickle the appetite. A local ice cream store has a steady stream of festival goers.

In addition to the Civil War, more recent wars are also brought to life with those who would re-enact the battles of World War I and World War II.

This year, it was the 25th and 104th Divisions of World War II which entracted steady visitors throughout the warm late summer day.

According to a participant in this group: "The U.S. took part in both theatres of operation during WWII. These were the Pactific and the European. Both had outstanding combat records in WWII and played key roles in the final Allied victory.

As "living historians" these men wear the uniforms and equipment and live in encampments just as the soldiers of WWII did.

"A soldier only dies when his memory is forgotten," said a re-enactor who wore a wool uniform.

The 25th Infantry Division was the first U.S. Army Division to see combat in WWII. The division was based at Schofield Barracks, Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941. It put up a spirited defense of the island of Oahu during the attack, and organized beach defenses in the days and weeks following. The division later fought in the battles of Guadalcanal in 1942-1943, New Guinea in 1943-1944 and also played a key role in the liberation of the Philippine Islands in 1944-1945. It ended its WWII service as army of occupation in Japan.

The unit founder's father, T-Sgt. Solomon F. Crumlic of the 27th Infantry, B company, 2nd Platoon Sgt., served in this division during WWII from 1943 to the war's end and to the occupation of Japan in 1946.

The 104th Infantry Division saw action in Europe in 1944 after the Normany breakout and was part of the push across France, mostly under the command of the British forces. Their route across Europe took them through Northern France, into Belgium, Holland and on into Germany, where they played an important role in the shrinking of the "Bulge", the Rhine crossing and the battle of Aachen, the first German city to fall to Allied forces on the Western Front. The 104th would eventually see 195 straight days of combat, quite a feat for a unit, which only landed in France in late 1944. The 104th was the first unit to find the secret plant and launching site for the V-2 rocket at Peenemunde. These are just a few of the highlights of this division's history in WWII.

Many young men from the Sharpsburg/Hagerstown area as well as the tri-state area served in both of these divisions.

Also represented at Sharpsburg in the Great War Foundation or WWI.

The Great War Foundation is a not for profit organization established to fill a gap between the scholarly first world war organizations and re-enactment societies. The primary mission of the GWF is to present the story of the first world war to the general public in a manner that is both informative and interesting through pulications, presentations, parades, and monument re-dedications including the use of original artifacts, photos and documents.

The G.W.F. also maintains a Memorial Park at a site that re-enactors have developed into a mock battlefield. The park, which will consist of white memorial crosses, is hoped to form a pattern 240 feet by 360 feet with a six foot wide central walkway.

Members of the G.W.F. have a special location near Lancaster where they hold weekend re-enactment battles for members only.

General Custer, one would presume.

Steve Papa is an active member of the Great War Foundation. He began re-enacting in 1995 and is a Vietnam War Veteran.

Paul Smith from Maryland has a large collection of WWII items. He does a little re-enacting but mostly shows. "There are 1100 veterans of WWII dying daily," he said.

Confusing Legends Names Of Chinese Export Porcelain

Fitzhugh may be an English name, but it is also the pattern name for some Chinese export porcelain. Among the pattern's claim to fame is its rarity as one of the most expensive examples of porcelain exported from China (1775-1850). Among status-conscious antiques collectors Fitzhugh is a real name dropper.

But don't drop any Fitzhugh-pattern plates...unless you don't mind dishing out a couple of thousand dollars to replace them.

There are several theories as to how the name Fitzhugh became a name for porcelain made in China. One theory is that it was ordered by an American sea captain who liked the design. Another, that it was first made for the English Fitzhugh family.

Or, that it is the mis-pronunciation of the Chinese city of Foochow.

Further proof that old legends die hard is the fact that for years Chinese export porcelain was referred to as Oriental Lowestoft. Blame it on William Chaffers, an English authority on ceramics and porcelain. In his first edition of "Marks and Monograms on European and Oriental Pottery and Porcelain" published in 1876, he stated that this type of porcelain was made in a small factory in Lowestoft, England. While the error was eliminated in later editions the legend lingered well into the 20th century.

Another fallacy: that it was

Antique Detective

made in England, then sent to China to be decorated.

CLUE: Basically the Fitzhugh pattern can be recognized by a diapered border and a central medallion, surrounded by four panel decorations. These represent Chinese symbols of the philosophy of life and the arts. While the designs are usually one color, an exception is the use of the American Eagle and shield in red, white and blue as a central medallion.

The borders were in the various colors used in the pattern: blue (the most common), orange, green, sepia, mulberry, yellow, black and gold. Borders of stylized butterflies date from 1785 are among the rarest. Other motifs included pomegranites, Buddha's-hand, and diaper forms.

It is extremely hard to date because so few documented pieces exit.

However, near the end of the 18th century, the American Eagle was popular.

Everything from complete dinner services to coffee pots and mugs, and candlesticks were made for the growing export trade.

Fitzhugh, like other Chinese Export patterns was never signed. So, if you are offered a piece having a square, pseudo-Chinese mark in red, with a running "S" beside it, you've found a very desirable fake. It was made in France in the 19th century by Emile Samson, the famous copyist. Nowadays it has collectors and a value all its' own.

The pattern was also adapted by Caughley and Coalport.

Before you start bragging about the Fitzhugh piece you discovered on a dusty antiques shop shelf, remember it has never stopped being reproduced. During the 1976 American Bicentennial, bowls decorated in the green, orange and blue Fitzhugh designs...along with some American Eagle medallions...were hot-selling repros. Originally they would have had the proper import sticker (made in Hong Kong). The stickers have long been gone, giving them overnight aging. While it is difficult to tell the old from the new, the Hong Kong copies are whiter than they should be.

Best advice is to buy from a reputable dealer specializing in Chinese Export porcelain.

THREE-DAY SIX-GENERATION MAYER HOMESTEAD ANTIQUE AUCTION

Port Royal, PA

Located in Juniata County along Route 333 at Port Royal, PA, midway between Harrisburg and State College, 3 mi off the Route 322 Port Royal (Route 75) exit. Follow Route 75 south to Route 333 west, turn left at Lehman's Covered Bridge. (Watch for signs)

History of the Mayer Homestead

As told to Bryan D. Imes by Elkanah (Ken) Lehman

In the early 1700's, Thomas Wilson came from Ireland to Philadelphia and established himself as a successful Philadelphia merchant. Being a good friend of the William Penn family, he was commissioned to chase squatters from 'Penn's Land' in this part of the Juniata Valley. In exchange, Thomas was given 1000 acres of land, owning the entirety of what we now know as Port Royal borough and vicinity. When he died in the late 1700's, Wilson left everything to his son, George, who built the covered bridge in 1851. When George died, he left everything to his son, William, who passed away in 1881. William's daughter, Lucie Jane Wilson, who had married Charles W. Mayer in 1878 inherited 350 acres of the original grant and when Charles died in 1932 and Lucie in 1934, the property was left to their 8 children. In 1939, seven of the children turned the homestead over to their brother, George L. Mayer. George retired from the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1949, moved to this farm, lived here 3 years and died in 1952. The farm was left to his sister, Rhoda Unger Mayer, who was never married. Rhoda resided in the homestead after retiring from a 40-year teaching career, passed away in 1967 and left the homestead to Lucy Wilson Buck, a niece, and her husband, Elkanah (Ken) Lehman. Lucy and Ken had married in 1948 and lived here for 54 years before Lucy passed away in February 2002, a retired teacher. Lucy taught English, French, & Spanish in the Juniata County School District and especially enjoyed directing plays and musicals. Ken is a retired farmer (15 years) and a retired representative for Clay Starline Agricultural Equipment, as well as having retired from an 18-year pool business, which was sold to a local man, Mark Book. Part of the original farm is now known as The Port Royal Lion's Club Park. Ken has now sold the farm to James and Susan Sheaffer of Port Royal and has ordered the sale of the items from his wife's old family homestead at public auction. Do not miss this six-generation auction.

The Case IH JX Series line, ranging from 42 to 80 PTO hp, is the value offering in Maxxima utility tractor family. The JX55, JX65, JX85 and JX95 are no-nonsense chore tractors with mechanical controls for easy use and service.

Versatility, Value Built Into New Case IH Utility Tractor

RACINE, Wis. — Case IH JX Series Maxxima™ tractors — the value line in the Case IH Maxxima utility tractor family — provide all the dependability and versatility utility tractor owners demand. Ranging from 42 to 80 PTO horsepower (hp), the five new JX Series Maxxima tractors represent a completely new offering for Case IH.

With the JX Series, Case IH is addressing the needs of a new market segment," said Willie Greaser, marketing manager for Case IH JX Series tractors. "Its simple design and mechanical controls ensure easy use and service, making Case IH JX Series tractors the ideal power source for lifestyle, hobby and part-time farmers, as well as producers looking for an affordable alternative."

Case IH JX Series Maxxima tractors are available in either two-wheel drive or mechanical front-wheel drive (MFD) configurations with a cab or a flat deck and rollover protection system (ROPS). The JX55 and JX65 offer three-cylinder engines, while the three larger models have four cylinders. Both Case IH engines are quiet running, durable and provide outstanding torque back up.

Farmers, homeowners and other operators can choose the transmission option that best suits their specific needs. A standard 12 forward, 12 reverse, synchronized mechanical shuttle transmission provides speeds ranging from under one to 18.5 mph. The optional creeper version offers eight additional forward speeds in the first two ranges

Both transmissions include a dedicated left-hand synchronized shuttle for easy directional changes during loader operations. In addition, a rear axle differential lock and limited slip differential on MFD axles keep Case IH JX Series tractors performing in tough conditions.

For operator comfort and convenience, JX Series Maxxima cab and platform models include both left- and right-side entry; adjustable tilt steering; mechanical seat suspension; and an ISO-mounted platform. The operator area is uncluttered, with an analog instrument panel and a user-friendly control layout. The sloped front hood offers best-in-class forward visibility.

Vermeer Adds New, Streamlined 'Big Squares' To Hay Products Group

PELLA, Iowa — In hay production, the name "Vermeer" may be synonymous with Big Round Balers; but lately, the "hay specialists" from Pella, Iowa have been marketing two new "Big Square" balers in limited production quantities.

"You're definitely going to know it when you see one of these new yellow machines," says Jay Van Roekel, a marketing manager at Vermeer. "They do not only alter the shape and look of the big-square (as opposed to the typical box-shaped models), but they also do a great job of demonstrating how quiet, simple and easy it can be to operate one."

According to Van Roekel "there's a major shift (away from 4x4s) to smaller 3x4-size bales because of the advantages these small packages offer in hay quality, bale density, to mention trailer-loading flexibility and capacity. Tractor horsepower requirements are also reduced," he added.

Vermeer SQ-Series Balers incorporate a smooth, streamlined product design with a robust, yet simple, big-square processing system to help minimize noise, maintenance and service time. Both SQ3347 and SQ2731 models feature self-contained hydraulics for density, automatic greasers, single side shields for easy service access and in-cab controls with "self-diagnostics."

New Vermeer Big Square SQ3347 Baler easy to operate.

The larger, shaft-driven SQ3347 produces 33.50-inch (height) x 47.25-inch (width) square packages that can range anywhere from 36 inches to 98 inches in length.

The 17,530-pound unit rides on tandem axles (with 500/50R17 tires) for greater stability and smooth handling. Tongue weight is 2,425 pounds. Recommended tractor requirements are 150 horsepower (minimum 135 hp); 1,000 rpm PTO; two sets of auxiliary remotes and minimum weight of 12,900 pounds.

Similar in design, the compact SQ2731 produces a smaller 27.5-inch (height) x 31.50-inch (width) square package, but offers the same variable length as the SQ3347 package, as well as many of the same features. The five-bar pickup has a working width of 83 inches. Tongue weight is 2,380 pounds.

Recommended tractor requirements: 100 hp (min. 80 hp); 1,000 rpm PTO; two sets of auxiliary remotes and minimum weight of 9,800 pounds. The 12,800-pound unit rides on 600/50-22.5 tires.

Agway Feed And Nutrition Sponsors Certified Dairy Herd Manager Program

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Demonstrating its commitment to the dairy industry, Agway Feed and Nutrition has developed a certified training program for herdsmen. The one-day seminar is designed to enhance the skills of those who manage dairy operations.

The seminar encompasses dairy nutrition, disease management, dairy replacement, and employee management. The subjects are all centered around issues that herdsmen face every day on the farm.

"We have developed this seminar so that herdsmen can learn about advances in dairy herd management and then apply this information to their farms," said Christopher J. Canale, Ph.D., Agway Feed and Nutrition's vice president of nutrition and research, who developed the certification program.

A certification test, based on the information presented, will be given at the end of the seminar. Successful completion of the test will allow herdsmen to be designated as Certified Dairy Herd Managers. The seminar content and test are sanctioned by the American Registry of Professional Animal Scientists.

The seminars are scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 6 at the Holiday Inn in Liverpool, N.Y. and Thursday, Nov. 7 at the Marriott Hotel in Harrisburg. Each session runs from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. The registration fee is $135 and includes all materials, lunch, and a Certified Dairy Herd Manager plaque.

To register or for more information, call Agway Marketing Services toll-free at (800) 254-2258.

John Deere Introduces No-Till Drills

LENEXA, Kan. — Beginning with the legendary 750 and 1560 No-Till Drills, John Deere revolutionized seeding in no-till, heavy residue soil conditions. Now, with several new enhancements including an electronic population rate control system, John Deere is introducing the new 1590 No-Till Drills that bring even more productivity and profitability to a grower's seeding operation.

"The 90 Series drills feature a new no-till opener that improves both seed placement and seed boot wear," says Mike Pitzer, project manager John Deere seeding group. "The seed boot has been realigned to the center of the opener arm's hub. which allows the seed to drop directly opposite of the depth gauge wheel, and provide a narrower profile to help reduce seed boot wear. This delivers better seed depth control and placement."

Wear improvements include a nodular cast-iron seed boot with a more narrow overall width. There is also improved spring pressure holding the boot to the blade and increased clearance between the blade, steel seed tube, and arm for improved residue flow.

A new residue shield has been designed to help prevent residue (especially corn stalks) from lodging in the t-handle, and provides more positive seed depth control. Customers can choose either smooth-sided or steel gauge wheels.

"Growers will truly appreciate being able to monitor and change seed population on the go with the electronic population rate control system, standard on the 1590 Drill," says Pitzer. "When used in conjunction with seed sensors and either a Computer Trak® 250 monitor or a SeedStar® monitor, an operator can monitor seeding rates and adjust them from the cab of the tractor."

New Teejet® XRC And AIC Spray Nozzles Combined Into One Cap

WHEATON, Ill. — Nozzle designs keep improving at Spraying Systems Co.®, and this time the focus is on the most commonly-used agricultural spray nozzles, the Extended Range XR TeeJet® and the Air Induction AI TeeJet.

Both spray nozzles have been combined with the Quick TeeJet® cap into one convenient part. The gasket, which assures a good seal between the nozzle and the nozzle body, is nestled in place with a ridge that prevents it from falling out when not installed. Now it's easier than ever to change spray nozzles — simply a twist of the wrist to install a brand new nozzle.

"We encourage customers to change their nozzles often to good spray quality, but sometimes it can be a nuisance," admits Marty Heyen, Teejet Resale team director. "Assembling the spray tip, nozzle cap and gasket while keeping everything in place and fitting it onto the nozzle body can be time consuming. Having one part in which everything stays put makes it easier and more efficient to change nozzles, and it assures the quality performance that customers expect from our spray nozzles."

The new XRC nozzle builds upon the rich history of XR TeeJet®, the most widely used nozzle in agriculture. First introduced in 1986, the XR TeeJet quickly became a favorite with farmers because of its ability to operate over an extended range of pressures.

In the springtime, farmers use it to apply pre-emergent fertilizer or herbicides at low pressures with drift reducing characteristics. After the crop emerges, they can apply pesticides with the XR TeeJet and be assured of excellent canopy coverage and penetration using slightly higher pressures that produce smaller droplets.

The XR TeeJet has become the industry standard, and is often cited in studies as the baseline by which spray nozzles and spray campaigns are measured and compared. The new XRC just makes the industry standard easier to use.

"The AIC could eventually give the XR TeeJet a run for its money as the industry standard because of regulatory pressure to control drift," believes Heyen. "With the added convenience of its new design, the AIC is both environmentally friendly and extremely easy to use."

How do you shatter the world plowing record set by a 425 hp track tractor? You don't have to get bigger. You don't have to get tracks. You just have to get better. That's what happened when the Massey Ferguson 8280 fixed frame wheeled tractor set a new world record. The MF 8280 fine tuned to deliver 387 hp, outdid the predecessor by nearly 100 acres, plowing 621 acres in 24 hours.

What makes the MF 8280 better? Take a world class engine, a transmission that won't quit and add a powerful hydraulic system. Throw in a high tech control system that automatically monitors and adjusts the flow of power to the wheels for less slip and you've got better...more than 24 acres an hour better.

So don't just get a bigger tractor next time you have a big job to do. Get a better tractor. Get a Massey Ferguson 8280 and shatter some records yourself.

A Preventive Service inspection during your off-season lets you be sure your Massey Ferguson tractors, balers and combines are ready for action, so you can be confident they're ready to go when the pressure's on.

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Between "Cherry Jubilee" and the distinctive coloring of "Uncle Sam," red was the color of the day at Allentown Fair's goat show.

The best doe in show title went to Crystal Kloiber's Cherry Jubilee. Melana Lovell's red-and-white Boer Cross, Uncle Sam, won grand champion in the market goat show.

Crystal Kloiber, Bath, from Peach Valley Dairy Goats, took home the best doe in show title with "Cherry Cordial." The animal is a second-generation homebred, out of homebred Cherry Jubilee.

The doe, said judge Todd Biddle, most effectively put together four scorecard categories — general appearance, mammary system, dairy character, and body capacity — "better than any other in the lineup," he said.

Kloiber's mother, brother, and soon her father, according she said, raise the farm's goats. Kloiber, also a licensed judge, judges about 10 goat shows a year for not only county but also state fairs. She is wrapping up her fourth year judging goats.

The family also exhibits the farm's animals at six shows a year, including county fairs and other goat shows. In addition she is milking 10 animals, which she brought to the fair.

In a patriotic gesture, Melana Lovell dubbed her goat "Uncle Sam" — a goat which took home grand champion honors in the market goat show.

The appropriately colored red-and-white Boer cross was the lone goat the Lovell brought to the show. In addition, she brought 31 sheep to the show, in combination with her sister, Annette. Lovell has been exhibiting goats for only two years, but has ten years of experience in the show ring with sheep, pigs, and beef.

Judge Todd Biddle stands with best doe in show winner "CC," owned by Crystal Kloiber. They are joined by Amber Buttner, Bath, Pennsylvania dairy goat youth representative.

She is from the family operation, Maple Spring Farm, Lynden. The 106-acre operation hosts Limousin-cross cows, Dorset, Suffolk, and Hampshire sheep, and Poland China pigs. Showing horses is next on her agenda, according to the Williamsport High School senior.

The goat took home grand champion placing at the Lycoming County Fair, and Lovell hopes to continue Uncle Sam's winning streak at the Farm Show.

Todd Biddle, Palmyra, judged the dairy and market shows. Biddle, an American Dairy Goat Association licensed judge for nine years, estimates that he judges 14-15 shows a year. This schedule takes him across the U.S., including two shows in Arizona this year, he said.

Melana Lovell and "Uncle Sam" won grand champion placing in Allentown's market goat show.

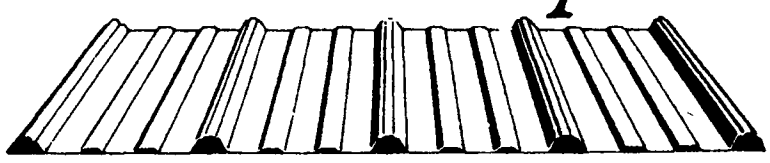
Rural Economy



Cost-efficient Centurydrain® roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Turning On A Dime:

Kenney's Quarter Horses Set The Pace In Barrel Racing

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ZIEGLERVILLE (Montgomery Co.) As the name suggests, at Racer's Edge Quarter Horse Farm, speed is paramount.

Not just straightaway speed, however. Twisting, agile, quick-thinking, tight-corner-turning speed.

Top barrel racers have been bred and raced under Dianne Kenney's care on the Montgomery County farm since 1974 when Kenney and her parents, Ted and Ellen, moved to the farm from Audobon for the acreage to house their animals.

The barn that stands behind the horse not only houses up to nine horses but also boasts a practice barrel racing arena.

The Starting Line: 4-H

The Kenney family began their involvement in the horse world almost by accident nearly 30 years ago.

Kenney, through participation in 4-H, received a Palomino for her 12th birthday, a horse which carried her and four other 4-H'ers to state championships. "They placed every time," said Kenney's mother Ellen.

After showing in the pleasure classes for six months, her father, who attended a show with her, noticed the excitement and competition surrounding the timed events and asked Kenney about the contests.

He later entered Kenney in a timed event, where she placed fourth in her first showing. From then on, she said, she just "stuck to" the sport.

Racer's Edge Horses

The Kenney family started their stables by simply buying a second horse to keep the first one company. Then "they (more horses) just started coming," said

Marjorie Gill, who has longtime experience with horses, has enjoyed getting to know the "Nakota" breed of horses found in South Dakota. Gill was the first woman member of the U.S. equestrian team in Olympic history.

CHESTER SPRINGS (Chester Co.) — Marjorie and Harry Gill have a long-running history with horses. Quality horses. Show-stopping horses. Winning horses.

Together, Harry and Marjorie Gill have owned and trained some of the world's best jumping horses. In addition Marjorie was the first woman member of the U.S. equestrian team in Olympic history.

She is passing on her varied experience in the horse world by giving dressage demonstrations in the farm's ring for those interested in the sport.

Now on Larkspur Farm are several friendly animals that respond quickly to Marjorie Gill's treatment and ever-ready carrots, as they obviously are used to her presence and touch.

"The horse must be loose, not stiff, and that must be learned,"

Horse Survey In Progress

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Penn State's Equine Science Program will conduct an economic impact study of the Pennsylvania equine industry beginning fall 2002.

The study will provide knowledge of the current scope and nature of Pennsylvania's equine community, enhancing government and citizen understanding. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, through the State Harness and Horse Racing Commissions, has contracted with Department of Dairy and Animal Science to conduct this very important survey.

It will assess the composition and nature of Pennsylvania's equine industry, including its direct and indirect impact on the state's economy through sales, employment, taxes and other indicators. Contributions to the quality of life of equine owners and participants in equine activities also will be assessed.

Data from Pennsylvania's last study of the economic impact of horses in the state was collected in 1990. It showed that the equine industry generated $4 billion in annual economic activity, was responsible for 22,000 jobs and provided local and state governments with more than $66 million a year in tax revenue.

"The Pennsylvania Quarter Horse Association, Pennsylvania Equine Council, and the Pennsylvania Harness and Horse Racing Commissions have committed to support the survey by providing addresses," says Ann Swinker, extension horse specialist, who is directing the survey. "It is key that the list we develop is representative of the entire industry.

"We will be asking every she said. They must develop a longer-arched neck and have their legs collected for dressage exercises for self-carriage — then a horse carries himself with presence," she said.

Gill is a firm believer in the benefits of the figure eight. This relaxes and balances both horse and rider.

Beginnings

Her love-affair with riding began early.

She "lived on a horse since I was about four," Gill said. Her aunt lived on an adjoining property and, to Gill's delight, had a barn full of horses that provided her first riding lessons.

She bought her first pony for $100 that she also taught to drive before she became interested in riding jumpers. A nearby farmer taught her and helped to take her to shows, where she had success and was asked to ride other horses.

"I jumped over the hoods of cars on dares — I love to jump," she said.

After graduating from an art school in Philadelphia she worked as a designer of children's clothing.

In addition to designing clothing, while Gill was living at home a picture in a horse magazine captured her attention. A photo showed a man and horse performing a "Piaffe," or trotting in place.

The reins were loose and the hind legs of the horse were well underneath the animal, showing balance and self-carriage. The picture and article prompted her to write to the German rider, Fritz Stecken, for lessons, who later called and asked to see her ride.

He agreed to have Gill come to New York and become a student in an indoor area to train in 1951, one year before the 1952 Olympics in Helsinki, Finland. Stecken helped to strengthen Gill's legs and seat by having her ride without stirrups.

Gaining a proper, strong "seat" is important in dressage. The rider moves as little as possible so the horse can keep his balance.

The prevailing German thought, said Gill, focused on the young rider's development of a "strong seat." or position in the saddle, which Gill also considers important.

Methodical in his training of both horse and rider, Stecken emphasized the balance of the horse.

Thoroughbred American Horse Shows Association champion "First Mate" takes a jump with Gill astride in 1958.

Gill lived on drastically low income while she trained. "My parents worried about how I was living," said Gill, who sold her own handmade jewelry and tailored riding outfits.

With her $5 a week for food, riding all day, and falling asleep sewing orders for riding jackets and breeches, Gill prepared for world dressage competition.

The instructor also helped by letting her ride and give exhibitions on one of his horses. She was 22 years old when she earned the opportunity to compete in the Olympics in Germany.

Since Stecken could not leave America, no trainer accompanied her. Gill faced quiet opposition from the male members of the team, as "they didn't want a woman on the team," she said. Her mother went along with her.

Once she was in Helsinki, however, she had a good ride on a German gelding, the Flying Dutchman. She was then invited to give an exhibition at the National Horse show in Madison Square Garden, New York.

Riding to the music of "The Syncopated Clock," they were given a standing ovation from Stecken's direction. This exhibition helped to spark an interest among other riders in dressage.

An Eye For Jumpers

Her husband, also an accomplished rider, has owned some of the world's best jumping horses, according to Gill. His practiced eye for the animals' jumping potential, plus their training regimen, has yielded winning horses at unlikely prices.

The couple purchased a Morgan-Thoroughbred mare, Linda Lee, for $125 since the neighbors couldn't control her speed. Linda Lee went on to win many stake (money) classes and be considered for the U.S. jumping team. Other horses, perhaps injured from the racetrack or temperamental and not able to be handled by others, came under Harry's tutelage.

The couples' indoor facility allowed them to exercise the horses and teach the animals to balance themselves. Developing a suppling routine lead to balanced horses, a key to their success, said Gill.

The Gills' training and care developed "Mr. Moon,"a horse they bought for $800 because he reared habitually with a rider in the saddle.

However under the Gills' care, Mr. Moon later jumped three shows without touching a fence. Additionally he was champion or reserve in every show except at Madison Square Garden, where he won two second places. The horse was Canadian jumper champion and was sold to a buyer from Canada.

Gill also worked with "Across the Nation," a white Appaloosa/ Thoroughbred that pulled hard at the trot and canter. Correcting exercising, lunging, figure eights, and walking on the ground behind the horse to relax the animal helped the horse become first level American Horse Shows Association (AHSA) dressage champion and Maryland junior hunter champion several times.

A young gray Thoroughbred that had fallen in a timber race, Gustavus, also came into the couple's hands. Even with a weak valve near his heart, Gustavus jumped for ten years and was the AHSA jumper champion for three years.

Gill rides a collected trot on The Flying Dutchman, the Hanovarian that she rode to compete in the Olympics.

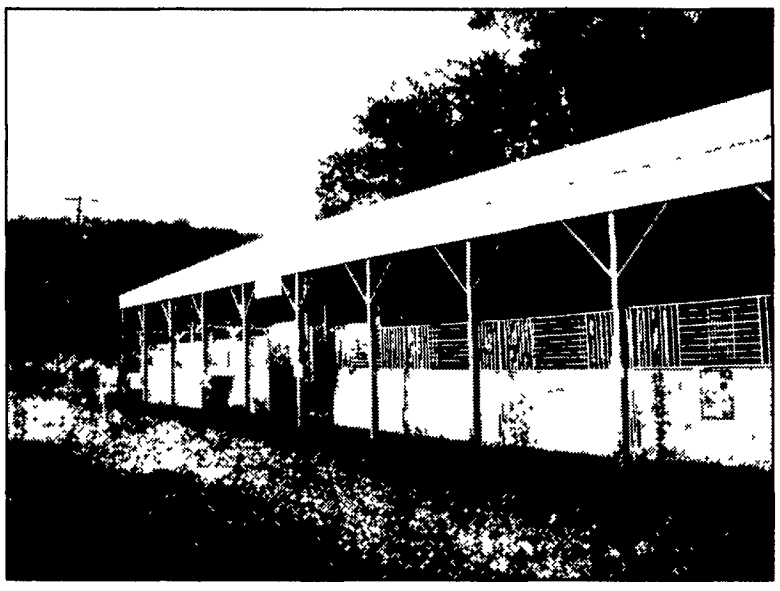
The Gills purchased and competed with "Idle Dice" for ten years and won many classes. In one class at Madison Square Gardens he cleared 7 feet 2 inches.

Harry also purchased a bay Thoroughbred that was raced and shown as a hunter with limited success. "Idle Dice" was ridden for ten years and won many classes. In one class at Madison Square Gardens he cleared 7 feet 2 inches.

Gill now divides her time between the horses, music, weaving, and writing. She not only plays several instruments but has composed and is working on recording her first album. In addition she has published several small books about her life experiences interests, and studies about energy.

Gill's latest venture is the addition of three "Nakota" horses and three Nakota ponies, a breed that survived in the Badlands of South Dakota.

Most of the Nakota horses rarely saw humans until they were chased into a corral to be sold by the government, according to Gill. These rare animals once were used by Sitting Bull. A North Dakota resident, Leo Kuntz, is responsible for researching their background, buying the animals, and bringing them to the East.



SUMMIT STATION (Schuylkill Co.) — The Schuylkill County Fair recently completed construction of a new horse facility for 16 horses and ponies at the fairgrounds. Members of four of the county's five 4-H horse clubs can bring their mounts to the fairgrounds to compete. The horses can fill 16 of the new barn's 18 stalls.

Kenney's Horses

Kenney.

The stable's horses, starting with the Palomino mare, have moved up in quality with the level of competition Kenney now participates in. Barrel racers start at $15,000, said Ellen.

The farm now hosts up to nine Quarter Horses and has been home to many of the top barrel racing horses in the country. In 1981, for example, their horse was the high point barrel racing mare of the year.

"Precocious Sugar," named Outstanding Horse of the World in 1993 by the World Equine Research Institute, helped to launch Kenney into the top echelon of barrel racing.

Kenney purchased the horse in Texas in 1982, when the horse was five years old and already running barrels.

Later, when the horse was retired to become a broodmare, Kenney hauled the mare to Oklahoma to be bred since Quarter Horse semen was not allowed to be shipped. That restriction that has since been overturned.

Now one of the horse's foals, "Black Cobra Jet," or "CJ," out of "Jet of Honor," a top barrel racing sire, is one of Kenney's two current racers.

Another Jet of Honor son, "CDF King of Honor," or "Rusty," as Kenney calls him, goes to shows each weekend along with CJ. The two five-year-olds have their best racing years ahead of them, as they will peak at 8-10 years old.

Both horses have been placing consistently and have some wins behind their name. Both are posting times that are close to each other. CJ, for example, has a tighter turn around barrels while Rusty, a larger-framed horse, has a faster straightaway run.

you say to slow them down or they'll go right past the barrel." Also, added Kenney, horses must be trained to stop at the end of the race — a discipline that has proven to be a difficult one for a few of her horses.

The Race

Once the horses are called into the ring for their turn, they are ready to run, since they have already gone through a 10-minute loosening up period in the holding pens, similar to an athlete stretching before competition.

The horse and rider gallop down a chute or alleyway that has a timer at the end. Once the timer is tripped the race is on.

"Most horses have the most problems with the first barrel. People call it the 'money barrel.'

"If you come across the first barrel right, you're lined up for the second barrel," said Ellen.

Ideally, the horses would go in to the barrel wider and come out to their turn tighter and ready for the next part of the cloverleaf pattern.

All In A Weekend

At one time, contestants, explained Kenney, didn't win money but points to qualify for the world championship show as they competed in events sponsored by the American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA).

Today, however, Kenney competes in the National Barrel Horse Association's (NBHA) events at a rate of up to 30 shows per year. Summertime is the busiest time of year for barrel racers, since most shows occur during that time. While some of the shows are conducted outdoors, the larger shows are always indoors to ensure consistent footing.

Kenney is careful about ring conditions. "I like to have at least eight inches of loose sand and clay," she said.

compete against 100-140 other entrants. She has gone to nationals since NBHA started. Before that, each year she competed in the AQHA's world show in Virginia.

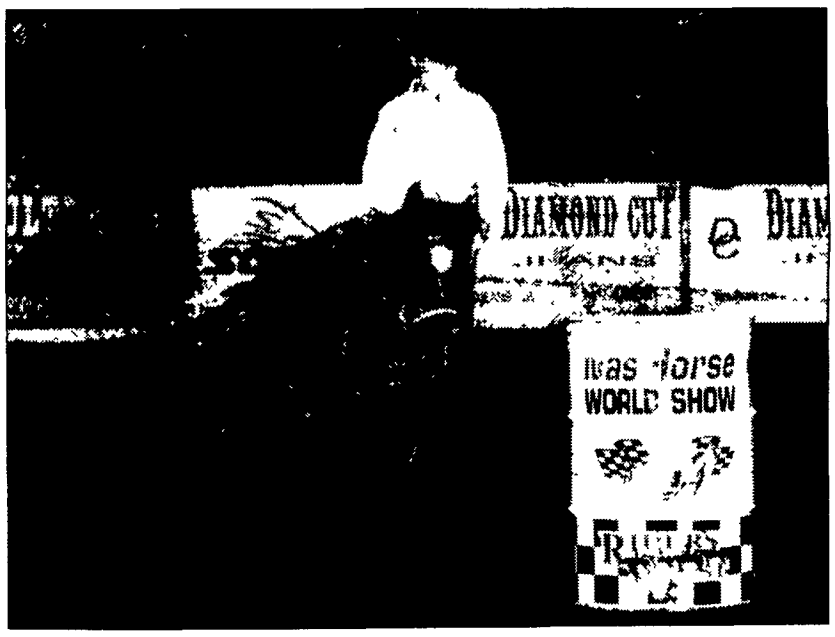
During a weekend show each horse may be ridden once on Saturday and once on Sunday. Each ride lasts an average of 15 seconds. If a horse hits a barrel, the the horse and rider is disqualified.

Kenney has a string of impressive titles behind her name. She has been world champion three years in a row, plus a three-time All-American Quarter Horse Congress champion. She has also won the biggest show in Canada three times.

In NBHA competition, there are normally three divisions at each show. The shortest time, for example, not only wins the event but sets the standard for the other divisions. Division number two, for example, is one second more than the first-place time, and division three is three seconds longer than the first-place winner.

Placings, and money, are awarded according to these divisions, so there are actually three first, second, and third-place winners. This gives the younger exhibitors, or exhibitors with less expensive horses, a chance to place, explained Kenney. The NBHA pays up to six places in each division, depending on how many entrants are in the class, according to Ellen. The purse amount depends on the number of entrants in each class.

Besides the numerous awards, certificates, and wins Kenney has accumulated, she also has a Tex Tan saddle named after her, said Ellen.



Dianne Kenney, a 29-year veteran barrel racer, takes a corner with "Rusty."

Although these two horses have an impressive family lineage, breeding is not everything, said Kenney. "They have to have the will to win. They have to want to run," she said.

"You've got to have a horse that combines brains plus speed to have a winner," said Ellen.

Training

Since practice makes perfect, Kenney usually spends a half an hour each day on each horse. This training is in addition to the care of the other horses, so "I'm often out riding until 10," said Kenney, who has a full-time job as a bookeeper for a nearby business.

"I don't drill them on the barrels," she said. "I may take them through a run once a week and trot them through a few times a week.

"They can get bored if we do it too many times they're not going to want to do it. I lose their attention quickly, especially the younger horses."

The horses are walked, jogged, loped, and otherwise worked in circles to help their body adjust to curving around barrels.

In addition, "A lot of the work is teaching them to stop," said Kenney. "Going into barrels, that's what

"If there are only a few inches or loose sand on the top, the horses fall over and it isn't worth the injuries," said Ellen.

Kenney participates in whichever shows she "can do in a weekend," she said. Her circuit includes shows in Pennsylvania and surrounding states in addition to North Carolina, Tennessee, and Georgia.

She may compete against 600-900 other horses, such as at national competition in Lexington, Va. On a "normal, every-weekend" show she may equine association with membership in the state, and individual horse owners, to provide their addresses so they are represented in this study," she adds. "The addresses will be held in confidence and used only for the distribution of questionnaires. After the study is completed, all records will be destroyed. We want to assure everyone that this will be horse people measuring horse people."

"We will give every bit of cooperation we can to this worthwhile study," noted Anton J. Leppler, executive secretary of the Harness Commission.

"The equine industry, and in our case the harness industry, is a bigger economic force than many people realize, and we will be glad when this report details the amount of economic stimulus our horsemen and horses produce for Pennsylvania."

Swinker pointed out that the survey needs a high return rate to develop valid results. "We will be undertaking a public relations campaign to ask that those who receive a questionnaire take the time to answer and return it," she explained.

"A postage-paid envelope will accompany the questionnaire. Returned questionnaires will be coded and information entered into a computer database for analysis. A descriptive report of the findings will be prepared and published."

Swinker encourages all horse owners and equine organizations to participate in the study. Equine groups interested in contributing their mailing lists or individual horse owners wanting to participate in the study should contact Ann Swinker, Penn State University, 324 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802. For more information, call Swinker at (814) 865-7810 or e-mail aswinker@psu.edu .

"We prefer the lists be sent on disk, but will gladly take them in any form," she says. "The Pennsylvania and Harness and Horse Racing Commissions are to be commended for their efforts to have the state Department of Agriculture funds contracted to Penn State University in order to conduct this much-needed equine population study for Pennsylvania."

The findings of the study will be available to user groups, free of charge, both in print and in electronic format. The project report is slated to be completed and available in the spring 2003.

Maryland Conducting Horse Census

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The first official horse census has begun in Maryland.

"We know that there are a lot of horses in Maryland and we know the equine industry is economically important," said Maryland Agriculture Secretary Hagner R. Mister. "Getting an accurate count of equine animals is the first step in planning economic development, health, safety, and emergency activities, and in understanding the breadth of the industry's economic impact."

The Maryland Horse Industry board has contracted with the Maryland Agricultural Statistics Service (MASS) to conduct the survey. "It is important that everyone who receives a questionnaire responds," said Gregory W. Gingery, chairman of the Maryland Horse industry board and show horse owner.

"Whether you own a single horse for your family's recreational use or run a large breeding or training activities, we need your input. Anyone concerned about submitting personal or financial information should know that by law all such information is strictly confidential."

The questionnaire was first mailed out mid-August, followed by a second mailing the end of September. The results are slated to be released Nov. 12 to the Maryland Horse Industry Board. The total inventory, when applicable, will also be broken down by county by breed of horse.

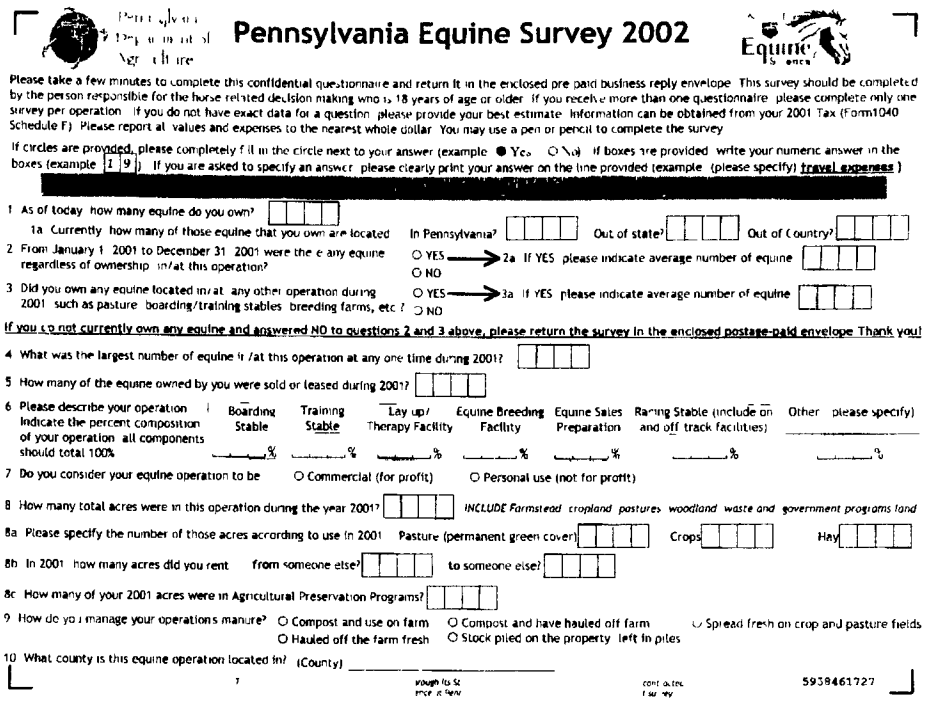
"We're very pleased with the response that we've received from the equine community," said Deputy State Statistician Dave Knopf.

"In terms of the kinds of numbers that we're seeing, it is what we expected," he said. "There hasn't really been any surprises."

The reason for gathering and developing equine statistics is to measure the size an impact of the industry for public and private decision-making purposes, not to be a part of any licensing, testing, taxation, or other regulatory activity.

"We're hoping that people will see the benefit" of completing and returning the survey, said Knopf.

"The horse industry has asked us to find out how many animals there are, the total amount of land associated with equine operations, and the economic scope and importance of the industry in Maryland," said state statistician Ray Garibay. "We look forward to working with horse owners and equine facility operators to get reliable answer to those questions."



Pennsylvania Equine Survey 2002

Please take a few minutes to complete this confidential questionnaire and return it in the enclosed pre paid business reply envelope. This survey should be completed by the person responsible for the horse related decision making who is 18 years of age or older. Information can be obtained from your 2001 Tax (Form1040 Schedule F). Please report all values and expenses to the nearest whole dollar. You may use a pen or pencil to complete the survey.

Clinic Focuses On Understanding Trailer Loading

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Consistency, patience, and remaining calm are keys to properly training a horse to calmly enter and exit a trailer, said Brian Egan, horse program assistant for Penn State Cooperative Extension, who conducted a clinic for trailer loading at Ag Progress Days in August 2001.

Egan uses a pressure-and-release, please-and-thank-you system of getting the animal to make a right move.

For instance Egan will lightly tap the horse's hindquarters with a whip until the animal takes a step toward the trailer, then stop tapping as soon as the animal takes a step. Egan is careful to stop tapping "as soon as the animal does one, not 1,000 steps," he said.

Although the clinic was titled "Understanding Trailer Loading," Egan said, "I like to think of it more deeply than that.

"We're thinking of what the horse is thinking. They're a little afraid. You can't force a horse to do anything. You want them to chose to go on the trailer, then they will go on it more and more easily each time. You don't want to fight them each time you get near a trailer."

Egan first let the Palomino filly just introduced to the two-horse trailer quietly walk up to the trailer. "Don't force her on," he said. "I'm going to ask her to go on. Even if she does the right thing — put her front hooves on the trailer — I won't push her because that's not rewarding right behavior."

Once the filly, after several patient tries from Egan, moved further into the trailer, he let her quickly back off, as she did several times. "I'm letting her realize she doesn't have to be on, it's just that she just can't be back there (away from the trailer)," said Egan, coaxing her front with taps on her hip.

"Horses want to do the easiest thing. If they find out it's the hardest thing to be back there, they'll move up onto the trailer," he said. "It doesn't take them very many times using the pressure-and-release method to realize that it's better to be on the trailer.

"You want them to chose to go on the trailer, then they will go on it more and more easily each time," said Brian Egan, horse program assistant for Penn State Cooperative Extension.

"She needs to get a reward not for getting on the trailer, but simply for stepping forward," he said. Egan stopped pressure even when the filly even shifted her weight to her back feet ("she thought about backing up," he said), while she backed from the trailer.

Egan let the filly dance around in front of the trailer until she stood comfortably in front of it. "I'm letting her find that 'happy place,' and if I can get her there, then I can get her on the trailer . . . one step at a time."

Once the filly was on the trailer, Egan pointed out that many people make the mistake of shutting the back of the trailer.

"That confirms the horse's worst fear — that once they are on the trailer, they'll never get off," he said. Consequently his first move, once the filly was on the trailer, was to begin to back her off.

"Getting a horse to back off a trailer can be hard," he said. "Make sure they're well broken to back."

Again, one step at a time is imperative. "Forcing an animal off the trailer makes them mad," he said. "A horse that gets a chance to rest has a chance to think about each step. I'm a firm believer in rewarding the smallest try. Don't ask her to take six steps when she doesn't know how to give you a half of a step."

Again, Egan left the filly stand quietly when her back legs had touched the ground, teaching her to get her feet on the ground and stop, to prevent her from learning to "fly" off the trailer, which could also be dangerous to both horse and handlers.

With a problem horse, said Egan, he will back the trailer into an alleyway of the barn so the right side of the trailer is flush against the wall, since horses tend to want to bolt to the right.

"Just because she's been on the trailer doesn't mean she's broke," said Egan. "I'm still hoping to get her to stand here (just outside the trailer) and think about it and realize that it's the same place as before," Egan said.

The filly has actually had a long history of being hauled, Egan said. She was first loaded in a stock trailer, a large goose-necked trailer, along with her mother when she was a foal.

This helps the animals get used to the noise and the hollow sound of the floor under their feet.

Consistency in handling horses is imperative, he said. "It's extremely important that you are consistent so your horse starts to learn what you want it to do," said Egan.

"Talk to them in the same language all the time. If you keep asking the same way and reward them, you'll make progress.

"Also, be patient with your horses. They're scared. Let them think, find, look, and calm down."

Additionally, handlers need to remain calm at all times, said Egan. "If I can stay calm, I'll keep my head."

analysis, and management of horses.

To provide educational support to the equine programs, Del Val maintains a breeding herd of 15-20 Standardbred mares along with the pacing stallion "Brod" p,1:51.4 (Albert Albert/Zanzara) and the trotting stallion "Spring Affair" 1:58.2 (Joel DeVie/Social Season).

Students in the Stable Management and Breeding Management courses manage the breeding herd during the academic year and are involved with health care, teasing, semen collection, breeding, and foaling.

Students in the Yearling Horse Management Course prepare yearling for the various Standardbred Yearling Sales held each fall in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Students may elect to earn a minor in any major outside of Animal Science. These minors, consisting of 15 credits, allow the student to obtain a high degree of technical and practical knowledge in very specific areas.

The Department of Animal Science boasts a 94 percent rate of placing graduates with employers or graduate school within six months of graduation, so it is no wonder that DelVal students have a variety of employment opportunities available in equine production, agri-business, education, and government.

An average of 83 percent of the Animal Science graduates obtains employment within the animal science industry within six months of graduation. Many are employed as stallion managers, foaling managers, farm managers, breed association representatives, livestock specialists and nutrition consultants.

As a result of training in both equine production and business, many graduates obtain employment with pharmaceutical companies, feed manufactures, and veterinary supply companies.

The program also offers the opportunity for a career in education. Many graduates are involved with 4-H, and FFA programs as well as teaching agriculturaleducation and science in high school.

For graduates interested in pursuing additional training in either veterinary medicine or graduate studies, one will find Delaware Valley College alumni attending universities throughout the United States, including Penn State, Rutgers, Iowa State, Ohio State, Colorado State, Kansas State, Virginia Tech and Missouri.

Ready To Thunder: Farm Show's Bright New Horse Arena

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Amidst the noise of lift machinery, drills and saws, state officials unveiled the Pennsylvania Equine Study, at a cost of $150,000, late in September at the new Farm Show Complex Equine Arena.

About three dozen horse industry representatives were on hand at the unveiling of the first horse survey in more than a decade.

Despite continuing construction at the unveiling, Sam Hayes Jr., state secretary of agriculture, reminded those who attended the ceremony, "That's good noise — that's progress," he said.

Hayes noted it was time for such a survey, especially in light of the arrival of Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE), conducted this past week at the Farm Show. He noted that KILE represents "the best draft horse competition in the United States of America."

The equine industry plays a big part in the state horse racing commission's activities. But the Equine Center can provide an excellent host to many horse-related activities.

According to Hayes, there are about 200,000 and more horses of all kinds in the state.

Colleges that lead efforts to improve the genetics of the industry including Penn State and its work with Quarter Horse genetics; Delaware Valley College, with its horse programs; University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center, with its veterinary science programs; and others.

There's plenty of room for crowds inside the Equine Arena at the Farm Show, to the tune of 1,800 visitors.

This is a view inside the Equine Arena atop the walkway looking toward the south side of the arena.

Hayes also noted that Pennsylvania is a "leader in therapeutic riding opportunities." And support industries depend on the horse industry. "Thousands of people depend on the equine industry for their livelihood," Hayes said at the ceremonies.

"There are tremendous societal benefits, there are civic benefits coming about because of the equine industry," he said.

Terry Etherton, a department head at Penn State, noted there are approximately 8,000 youth 4-H horse projects in the state, and "kids are pursing careers in equine science," he said.

Rabold Shares Horse Pleasure Through Carriage Rides

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

NEWMANSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Ruth Ann Rabold grew up helping her dad with horses. The Myerstown farmer used horses in plowing demonstrations and circus parades. Ruth Ann showed horses and competed in barrel racing.

After her marriage to Donald Rabold, Ruth Ann lived without horses for four years, but her heart yearned to handle a horse again. So much so that she purchased a bridle on impulse and hid it in a closet.

When her husband was searching for something, his hand groped the bridle, and he asked, "What's all this strap stuff?"

He did not share her love for horses, but he conceded to her wish, and Ruth Ann soon had a horse for trail riding and showing.

Horses brought Ruth Ann so much pleasure that she wanted to share them even more with others. For years she harbored a secret desire to provide horse and carriage rides for weddings, parties, proms, and other affairs.

That meant loading the horses and carriages on a truck to transport them to the site specified by clients. It was a hefty job. Her husband said that if she wanted to do it, she could, but not to expect any help from him.

"He was busy with his heavy construction work, and he doesn't enjoy horses," Ruth Ann said.

So she learned to drive truck to transport her horse to shows.

"Not many women were doing that 25-30 years ago," Ruth Ann said.

"Today my husband often helps me by driving the truck. He'll even hook up the horse and carriage," Ruth Ann said.

The couple had three children, who are now adults and have provided them with five grandchildren. Somewhere along the way, Ruth Ann purchased several miniature horses and donkeys for her grandchildren. Soon she was taking the miniature animals to birthday parties.

Ruth Ann had purchased a Paint draft horse from her father's stock that was disbursed after his death.

"I like Paint because it is unusual. Draft horses are normally solid colored. You can cross a draft horse and a Paint and hope to get a Paint, but it is never guaranteed," she said.

According to Ruth Ann, Painted breeds are in vogue among horse people now, but the "hot" colors go in cycles.

Ruth Ann provides horses and carriages to match formal or western themes. She enjoys decorating the carriages to complement the colors of the bridal party. She also dresses in a white or black suit with a top hat for formal affairs, in gowns for those with a renaissance flavor, and in a cowgirl hat and clothing for western occasions.

Ruth Ann Rabold, dressed in black hat and tails, uses horse and carriage to transport a bridal couple to the reception.

"I like meeting people and going to different places that I wouldn't normally get to," Ruth Ann said. "The hardest part is finding a place to park the truck and trailer in cities."

Friends and farmers often call her and ask her to haul for them. She has hauled all types of livestock, produce, and flowers locally and to New York, Arizona, Delaware, and New Jersey.

For the past 18 years, Ruth Ann teaches two weeks of grooming and riding to students during the summer. Her donkeys and miniature horses are in demand for many school plays and for nativity scenes.

Taking a donkey to a local nursing home has become a popular event that bedfast patients look forward to. Ruth Ann said that many of the residents who are former farmers are especially thrilled to have a donkey come to their bedside.

Ruth Ann also works as a nurses aid four days a week from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. "Four hours a sleep is plenty for me," she said of her ability to fit so many different things into her schedule.

For more information about Rabold's carriage rides, call her at (717) 949-3259.

Six horses and several miniature horses and donkeys graze on the Rabolds' property. The horses are used to provide horse and carriage rides and the miniature horses and donkeys for children's parties, school and church plays, and other events.

Western-style carriage rides are the choice of some bridal pairs and people celebrating other occasions.

This is a familiar scene during the Christmas season when Lebanon County school students reinact the Christmas story using Rabold's donkey.

Director Named For Equine Science Center

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Dr. Karyn Malinowski, specialist in equine sciences and animal sciences professor, has been appointed director of the Equine Science Center at Rutgers' Cook College.

Dr. Malinowski has been a faculty member at Cook College since 1978. She has long been active in cultivating funding for research and extension programs from private, horse industry sources as well as research companies and the New Jersey Special Equine Initiative.

An alumna of Rutgers, Dr. Malinowski earned her bachelor's degree in animal science, a master's degree in animal genetics, and a doctorate in reproductive physiology and endocrinology. She has received numerous awards for her work.

Dr. Malinowski has played a large role in shaping Cook College's current equine science program, which has received international recognition. Since 1978, the equine science program has grown to include three full-time faculty members. Today, students at Rutgers University can minor in equine science and be fully prepared to enter the equine profession upon graduation.

"Few — if any — states have assembled an equine teaching, research and outreach program like that at Cook College, and Dr. Malinowski has been the person principally responsible for guiding the development of this outstanding program," says Dr. Jen Maw, acting executive dean of ag and natural resources.

Booklets Available Through Agway

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Agway Bagged Feeds dealers are now carrying a series of booklets for horse owners or prospective horse owners.

The booklets, "Before You Buy a Horse" and "Myths and Wives Tales of Feeding Horses," are part of Agway's More About Horses series.

"Before You Buy a Horse" features guidelines and tips to help you search for the horse that is right for you and your family, says Bob Mulrooney, the marketing and sales manager for Agway Bagged Feeds.

"Myths and Wives Tales of Feeding Horses," written by Stephen G. Jackson, Ph.D., explains what horse owners should and should not do in developing feeding regimens for their animals.

Reprinted with the permission of Kentucky Equine Research, Inc., Dr. Jackson answers questions that horse owners frequently ask. Too often, Dr. Jackson says, advice is passed from one person to another and it is eventually taken as fact. But second-, third-, and even fourth-hand information can be dangerous, especially when it comes to the health of a horse.

"The guidelines contained in 'Before You Buy a Horse' will help clarify your goals before you begin your search," Mulrooney says. "The tips in 'Myths and Wives Tales of Feeding Horses' will give you greater confidence in what and how you feed your horse."

Color Of Horses Book Published

BARNESVILLE, Ohio — The book "Color of Horses" has been published for the sixth printing according to illustrator Darol Dickinson of Barnesville, Ohio. The book is regarded as the scientific and authoritative identification of the color of horses around the world.

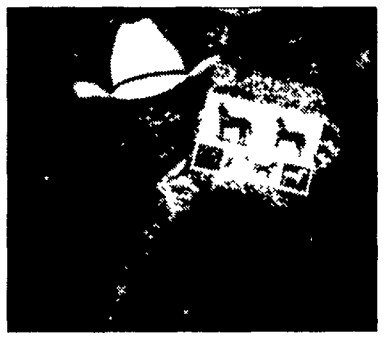
The book contains reproductions of 34 oil paintings created to exact color specifications by Darol Dickinson. Each color production shows variations in colors as represented in numerous breeds of horses found worldwide. The colors are matched to the exact breeds of commonly-found horses.

Dr. Ben Green, the author, passed away the week after the first printing. In the absence of the author, Dickinson assisted with revisions and the current sixth printing update.

The original 34 paintings were created in oil and were 20 inches by 24 inches.

Dickinson, once a member of the Cowboy Artists of America, created the paintings for the best selling book prior to relocating to Ohio. He now manages Dickinson Cattle Company, Inc.

Copies of the new "Color of Horses" book signed by the artist can be purchased for $25 postage paid.



"The Color of Horses" has just been revised and printed in a sixth edition. Artist Darol Dickinson of Barnesville, Ohio created 34 oil paintings to illustrate the solid colors of horse breeds around the world.

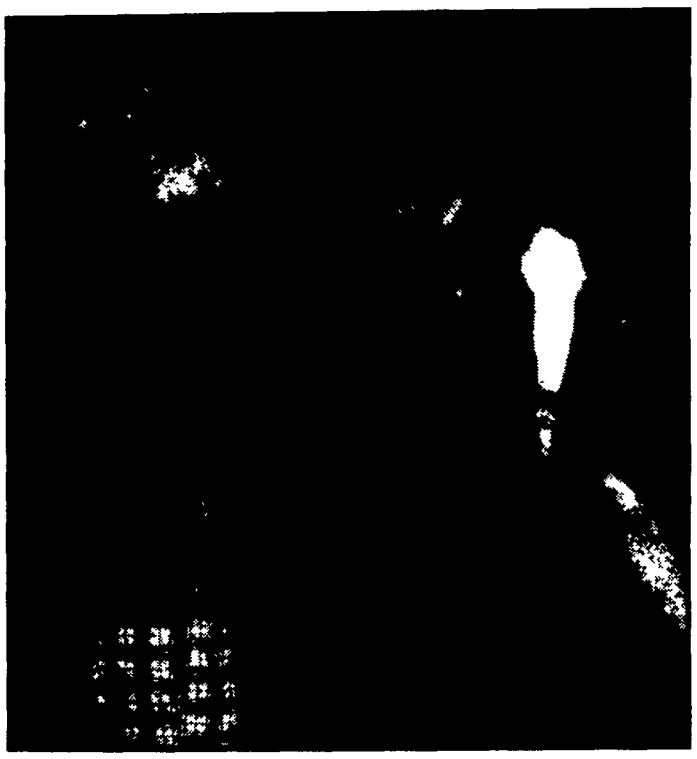
Maryland State Fair Hosts Several Days Of Horse Shows

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

Timonium, Md. Here are a few shots from around the ring during a small part of Maryland State Fair's horse shows. In the day of Thoroughbred and non-Thoroughbred competition, 44 non-Thoroughbred horses and 19 Thoroughbreds were exhibited.

Each day was a different show at Timonium, as 4-H'ers competed in equitation, fitting, and showmanship classes, and adult exhibitors showed ponies, draft horses, and Thoroughbred and non-Thoroughbred animals, a total of approximately 800 animals.



Above, Sarah Smith, New Oxford, braids Hanoverian "Fiera's" mane, a job she has been doing for Wendy Staub, New Oxford, for ten years.

At left, April Miskimon, holds "Daisy," or, more formally, "Leaguers Lil Miss," a quarter horse filly. The filly is from Flying K Farm, Joppa.

Above, Rachael Campbell, Berryville, Virginia., leads mare "Maggie" and foal "Smoochie" to a mare-and-foal Thoroughbred class. Campbell has been showing horses for 10 years. The animals are part of Stone Ridge Farm.

Maryland State Fair Hosts Horses

"Sheiswildandcageytoo," grand champion Thoroughbred, stands with Debbie Moorefield and owner Jay Williamson, Reisterstown, Maryland.

"Dance In A Cage" was this year's Challenge Trophy winner, a donated trophy given class winners of the mare without foal class. Owner Jay Williamson, Three Dog Farm, in Cockeysville, has spent 15 years breeding and showing at the Maryland State Fair.

"Fools Gold," with Dan Short, Salisbury, at the halter, was named champion of the non-thoroughbred show. The horse is owned by Daryl Layfield-Insley, Princess Anne, Md.

Pat Defelice co-owns "Mucho Dinero," a Dutch Warmblood/Thoroughbred crossbred. The two-year-old is already experienced in the show ring, being exhibited at several shows a month, according to Defelice.
